SPEED PREPAREDNESS, M'ARTHUR URGES

Allies Push Ahead; Reds Regrouping

Move Up on Western Front for 4th Day; Straighten U.N. Line

TOKYO, May 5 (AP)—United Nations tank-infantry columns clanked into the Korean no-man's land on the hunt for withdrawing Red forces.

"This isn't a general advance," said a spokesman at U. S. Eighth Army headquarters, "but we're sparring for an opening."

The armored columns struck ahead on the western front for the fourth consecutive day.

The Red spring drive that began April 22 had wilted in its first stage. Now the United Nations army was tightening up slack in the lines.

Except for the British Gloucestershire battalion which was badly mauled, no Allied units suffered severely in the Red drive that was stopped just short of Seoul.

Reds Hurt Badly.

The Chinese and Red Korean forces suffered heavily, however.

Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander, estimated the number of Red casualties in the current spring drive at about 70,000. A daily compilation of United Nations air and ground forces communique tells place the enemy dead and wounded at around 50,000.

Eighth Army staff officers reported heavy Red troop movements in rear areas.

Field reports Saturday listed 21,000 men and 500 horses north of Chunchon on the central front.

Presence of mine fields on the western front north of Seoul also indicated the Reds were planning another drive.

One American officer said the Chinese always lay "acres of mine fields" to screen an area in which they are massing for attack.

AP Correspondent Robert Eunson at Eighth Army headquarters reported the general belief is that the next Red smash won't come immediately. When it does, Army sources said, it will be in the form of pressure on Seoul.

Eunson said most military men believe the Reds will need more armor than they have displayed up to the present to smash around beyond U. N. forces defending Seoul.

Chinese Reds offered no fight as the United Nations line was pushed forward northeast of Seoul in the region of the Pukhan river.

Farther east of Seoul, in the Peninsula's mountainous heart, some Red forces fell were with-

Scheduled Election Eve

3,000 To March In School Bond Parade

More than 3,000 Marion school students from grades four through 12 are scheduled to parade Monday night to urge support of the $2,900,000 bond issue for a new senior high school and improvement of other school facilities at Tuesday's primary election. The parade will start at 7 p.m.

Clark Fouts, principal of Vernon Junior High School, is chairman of the parade committee which is made up of the faculty advisors and student counselors of all the junior high schools and Harding High.

Norman Fogt, director of pupil personnel, is co-chairman with Mr. Fouts. Loren Tomlinson, principal of George Washington and Forest Lawn Schools, is chairman of the elementary school's division of the parade.

Richard Lewis, president of the Harding High School student council, will be grand marshal leading the parade.

Band Next in Line

Next in line will be the Harding High School band under the direction of Homer Huffman, followed by floats prepared by Harding High School and its school organizations, including athletic teams.

Following Harding High will be Edison Junior High students with their floats, then State Street Junior High and Vernon Junior High with floats, then the 11 elementary schools with posters and banners.

The Harding High unit will form in the parking lot of the Probst Supply Co. and the three junior high schools will form at the Ohio Edison Terminal Building on West Center street. The elementary schools will form around the playgrounds of the old Central Junior High School.

"Baby Buggy Brigade"

Silver Street School will bring up the rear of the parade with a "baby buggy brigade" to demonstrate the need for more school facilities because of the rising birthrate in Marion.

Throughout the parade, a motorcade will carry class officers, school cheerleaders, and outstanding student leaders from all the schools.

The parade will move east on Center street to State, south on State to Church and west on Church until the rear of the Vernon unit clears Orchard street. The 11 elementary schools will then march north on Orchard to West Center and return to the Central Junior High School grounds to break ranks. High school and junior high units will continue west on Church to Garden street, where they will march north to their formation places to break ranks.

City police and school officials today urged school students to return home immediately after the parade and not loiter in the downtown district.

Jaycees To Help

The Junior Chamber of Commerce will precede the parade on its route with a sound truck calling attention to the approaching parade.

The Retail Board of Managers of the Marion Chamber of Commerce and its cooperating merchant members will display Har-

5 Killed In Crash Near Mansfield

Lone Survivor Of Headon Collision In Critical Condition

MANSFIELD, O., May 5—(AP)—An automobile trip to get a birth certificate ended in a head-on two-car collision on U. S. Highway 42 four and a half miles north of hede today, killing five persons.

The lone survivor is in critical condition at Mansfield General Hospital.

The dead are:

Hurston Holbrook, 25, Cleveland.

Mrs. Nannie Holbrook, 22, his wife.

Mrs. Nancy Etters, 23, of Cleveland.

Grady Ferguson, 24, of Cleveland.

Robert Kelley, 33, of Ashland.

The survivor, George Sanborn, 28, of Sandusky, one of the drivers was hurt critically and is in Mansfield General Hospital.

The Cleveland people were en route to Missouri Branch, W. Va., where the Holbrooks once lived. They were seeking a birth certificate for Holbrook, who had been asked by his employer to furnish one.

The highway patrol said Holbrook was driving the other Clevelanders southwest towards Mansfield on the three lane highway. Sanborn's car met Holbrook's in the center lane.

It took several hours to pull the bodies from the huge pile of scrap steel left by the crash.

Kelley and Sanborn were in one car, the other four persons in the second.

State Highway patrolmen said the two cars were moving at high speeds.

They said the two cars were so thoroughly entangled it was impossible to tell what make or model they were.

Holbrook and Ferguson were employed as grinders at Mills Co. Inc. Cleveland. Mrs. Etters was Holbrook's sister.

Truman Funds Cut 96 Percent

WASHINGTON, May 5—(AP)—Economy forces in the House today pointed to a walloping 96 percent cut in President Truman's emergency funds as evidence that they're pushing ahead in their drive to reduce government spending.

The President's funds came under the axe yesterday when the house passed and sent to the Senate a $6,144,450,355 appropriations bill financing 27 independent federal agencies for the year starting next July 1.

The total was $693,137,110 less than Mr. Truman has asked. And $24,000,000 of that was slashed from the President's own emergency money request. The fund is given the President to meet emergency needs arising from domestic or foreign developments not provided for in specific appropriations.

Gov't Widens Control Over Construction

Residential Housing Included In New NPA Order

WASHINGTON, May 5—(AP)—Government control over construction has been extended to take in "luxury" housing, big apartments, industrial plants and public projects.

The National Production Authority (NPA) announced last night that no single-family home costing over $35,000 may be started without its consent.

The order, effective immediately, also requires each builder to obtain an NPA permit for any "multi-unit residential buildings" (apartment house) in excess of three stores and basement.

And it brought under similar control major construction fields which so far have been untouched in the mobilization drive—any factory, school, hospital, church, industrial warehouse, highway, bridge, water system, utility or railroad project which uses more than 25 tons of steel.

Blanket Coverage

The latter broad category covers, in effect, every type of construction which was not already under NPA regulation.

Newspaper plants, and radio and television stations now will require NPA permits regardless of the steel tonnage involved, the agency said.

Elaborate outdoor advertising displays were banned. They were placed in the same prohibited category as amusement places and the theaters, but the standing exemption of $5,000 will take care of most outdoor signs.

Behind the order, NPA administrator Manly Fleischmann said, is a "growing, critical shortage" of steel. Effect of the action will be two fold:

First, it will let NPA pick and choose the projects into which large quantities of structural steel should go. These might be factories contributing to the defense effort or schools and hospitals filling a serious local need.

Second, it will compel builders of less-essential projects to scale down their plans, adopt less critical materials, or redesign buildings to eliminate excessive use of structural steel.

With respect to homes, an NPA spokesman said, some houses in the over $35,000 class may be approved, but only where there is relatively slight use of materials which are in short supply.

First On Residential

The luxury-home order was NPA's first direct encroachment on residential building. Earlier federal restraints have been applied to federal housing insurance, mortgage credit and down payments.

The order will not halt construction already underway. NPA

Child Welfare Board Lists Metz Charges

Ousted Officials Of Home To Fight For Reinstatement

The Marion County Child Welfare Board yesterday afternoon made public the charges filed against Mr. and Mrs. Mac D. Metz, the now discharged former superintendent and matron of the Marion County Children's Home.

The Child Welfare Board charged Mr. and Mrs. Metz with incompetency, insubordination, neglect of duty, malfeasance and other alleged failures of good behavior. The charges were filed yesterday with the State Civil Service Commission.

In an answer filed with the board Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Metz flatly denied all the charges. This denial accompanied the charges when they were filed yesterday at Columbus by Attorney Louis B. Conkle, a member of the firm of Guthery, Harmon and Conkle, attorneys for the board.

Sixty-eight allegations against Mr. Metz are noted in charges filed against him while 37 allegations against Mrs. Metz are contained in the charges against her.

To Fight Ouster

Russell M. Wilhelm and Robert A. Kelly, attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Metz, said their clients will make a fight for reinstatement when the State Civil Service Commission convenes in the Common Pleas Court room in the courthouse for a public hearing on the case, probably next month.

The board charged Metz with incompetency because of a violent temper and cites six incidents in which he is alleged to have exhibited his temper. On four of these occasions he is charged with slapping boys at the home.

The charges allege Metz was unable to maintain discipline at the home without rules the board deemed detrimental to development of the children and without engaging in or permitting excessive punishment. One of these rules the board charged it found objectionable was that children were not allowed to talk to children of the opposite sex even when members of the same family.

Charge Insubordination

The Child Welfare Board listed three alleged instances of insubordination on the part of Metz. The first was an alleged failure to obey an oral order issued about Oct. 1950 to permit a case worker employed by the board and the secretary of the home to answer telephone calls and make the home phone available to them. The second was that against the wishes of the board he allegedly from time to time cut off telephone service in the home office so incoming and outgoing calls could not be placed or received. The third was that he failed to obey an order of the board to appear at a public board meeting April 5, 1951.

Most allegations against Mr. Metz were on the charge of neglect of duty. These ranged from

NO PIPE OF PEACE. is the one Gen. Douglas MacArthur clamps his teeth on in Senate caucus room in Washington, where he gives his version of Far East policy and the events which led to his dismissal by President Truman from supreme command in the Far East. MacArthur testified that he understood Defense Secretary George C. Marshall favored Korean armistice terms including U.N. recognition for, and abandonment of Formosa to, the Chinese Reds. MacArthur told the Senators Marshall "disapproved" a Joint Chiefs of Staff recommendation opposing the above aims.

Hearing in "Crisis" When MacArthur Breaks His Pipe

WASHINGTON, May 5—(AP)—There was a moment of crisis today in the Senate hearings on Korean War policy. Gen. Douglas MacArthur dropped his pipe and it broke. The senators sent a messenger post haste to buy the general a new one.

Just in case MacArthur couldn't wait, an aide to the Senate armed services committee searched its committee room and found an old pipe in a desk drawer. He cleaned it up, polished it off and hurried it to the general.

MacArthur is famed for his corncob pipes. But he has been smoking the more conventional kind during the hearings here.

Records of MacArthur Speech Going Fast

The biggest selling record sensation of the year is a recording of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's speech to Congress April 19, Marion record shops report.

While shipments of the record have not been received in Marion as yet, advance orders placed for the recording of the famous speech have been "unbelievable," one shop reported.

Record shops in Marion expect to receive a shipment of the records in all speeds either today or Monday.

Says First Blow Could Be Decisive

"Maverick" Running Loose in World, He Tells Senators

WASHINGTON, May 5—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, saying there is "a maverick running loose in the world," today urged speed on the U. S. preparedness program and warned: "The first blow in the next war may well be the decisive blow."

Yet MacArthur told senators he does not believe the present military expansion program would have to be increased to carry out his proposals for beating Red China.

All that is needed to knock out the Chinese, he contended, "is to release the power we now possess."

Seemingly as fresh as when he started, MacArthur was back before two Senate committees for the third day, battling for his proposals on how to fight the Korean war. It was these hit-the-Chinese ideas which led President Truman to fire the five-star general as Far Eastern Commander.

Some of MacArthur's testimony has amounted to an attack on President Truman, but the White House declined to make a reply at this time.

At a news conference, presidential secretary Joseph Short replied with a "no comment" to all questions dealing with the hearing. One was a request for reaction to MacArthur's brushing off as "tommyrot" President Truman's statement that the general had refused for a time to permit free operation of the Central Intelligence Agency at his Tokyo headquarters.

Highlights

In the course of today's testimony, MacArthur:

▶ Said he would advise that Congress delay a decision on universal military training until the country gets through "the emergency that faces us now."

▶ Confirmed that he said at the October, 1950, Wake Island conference with President Truman that the U. S. Second Division could be moved from the Far East to Europe in January of this year.

▶ Declared the United States would not be required to maintain in Korea anything like the manpower now there, if his program were carried into effect and the United Nations were victorious.

▶ Related that he had made plans to evacuate "the mass of our troops" to Japan if it became necessary to withdraw from Korea.

▶ Begged not to be "drawn into political discussions" when pressed about what forces should be sent to Europe. MacArthur said he understood it was a "very heated, mooted thing" in Congress. But he advised against any "straitjacket formula" and said Congress should give close attention to the professional advice of military leaders.

MacArthur's plea for speed in preparedness came during questioning by Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex).

Don't Get Time

"You don't get the time now to prepare that you had in the past," MacArthur said. "The first blow in the next war may well be the decisive blow."

Continuing, he said: "There is no method by which you can avoid the surprise attack of an enemy these days. He hits and then he announces, or he hits and doesn't announce.

"And if you are not ready at that time you might well be overwhelmed."

Then, a little later, he added.

"As long as you have a maverick running loose in the world, it means that your necessity for preparedness increases unless you can find the formula to settle the whole matter."

Reporters are barred from the hearing but receive a censored stenographic report. Consequently, there is no opportunity to see the manner in which statements are delivered.

But Senators Ives (R-NY) and Moody (D-Mich) told them that

Bus Drivers, Firm, Break Off Talks

Strike Possible; 35 Cent Wage Increase Sought

A possible bus strike next month threatens the Marion Rapid Transit Co.

Union contract negotiations between representatives of Local 222 of the Transport Workers of America, C.I.O. and the bus company deadlocked and were broken off today. The union represents 18 drivers and two mechanics.

The present union contract expires June 2.

Negotiations broke down when the company declined to discuss a union demand for a 35-cents-an-hour wage increase in the new contract.

Gene Zeigler, president of Local 222, said the present rate for drivers is $1.05 per hour.

Ray Maag, president of the bus company, said the company could not pay the wage increase asked because the company is operating at a loss now.

For this reason, he said, he could see no point in continuing negotiations with the union.

He said the company was arranging talks with city council's utilities committee in the near future to discuss a possible shortening of bus routes so the company could break even on its operations.

Sheldon Dodds, vice president and treasurer of the bus company, and Mr. Maag represented the company. John Tipton of Columbus, international organizer of the Transport Workers of America, C.I.O., with local President Zeigler represented the union.

There were indications that 19 or 20, a comparatively large field, would parade to the post this afternoon.

New Fighting Breaks Out In Palestine

ISRAEL-SYRIAN FRONTIER, May 5—(AP)—The battle of the Jordan raged again today as Israelis and Syrians blazed away at each other with artillery and mortars north of the Sea of Galilee.

After a lull during the hours of darkness, the Syrians opened a dawn attack on Israeli positions, the Israelis said. An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv said Syrians also tried to seize the commanding height of Tel El Mutella inside Israeli, but were repulsed after an 80-minute battle.

In Damascus, a Syrian army communique said the Israeli troops opened up an attack at 4:30 a.m. local time with heavy shelling from artillery, mortars and machineguns. The communique said the fighting yesterday died down at 8 p.m. Israeli losses during the last 24 hours were estimated at 27 killed.

Under cover of artillery fire, the Syrians reportedly tried to remove the bodies of their fallen soldiers in the demilitarized buffer zone between the two countries. Israelis here say the Syrians were trying to remove evidence that Syrian regular troops were involved in the attack. Two Syrian planes, apparently on reconnaissance, were seen over the area this morning.

The fighting broke out yesterday only three and one-half hours after the two feuding countries had agreed to a U. N.-sponsored cease-fire. Israel accused Syria of violating the cease-fire.

The Syrians said they had been sure at the time the cease-fire was reached yesterday of "Israel's ill intentions" but "we wanted to leave no stone unturned for reaching a peaceful settlement of the events which recently took place in the demilitarized zone."

This referred to fighting since Wednesday in the area where the Jordan river flows into the Sea of Galilee and streams north to the Huleh swamps.

The Syrians have charged repeatedly that Israel's drainage project to reclaim the Huleh swamps for farmlands violates the armistice which ended the Palestine war in 1948.

The Associated General Contractors of America Inc., said last night the new order "will have upon the construction industry an unnecessarily harmful effect and the defense program and essential civilian activities" unless administrative machinery to handle construction applications is set up "without delay." The organization said in its statement it represents 5,800 of "the nations leading construction firms."

Permits View, Stops Heat Loss

Window Wall New Home Trend

WHAT WILL THE house of the 1960s look like?

Every home owner would like to know. Very few who bought or built in 1940 have found their homes entirely in step with the trend in the 1950s.

Windows have become much larger, one story rambling houses have become more popular, designs have been simplified in general and bigger lots are in favor.

Indications are that this trend will continue, aided and abetted by new developments in heating and cooling, more electrical refinements and means for still easier housekeeping.

This was indicated recently in a nationwide survey by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. More than 1,000 professional observers predicted that bigger windows would be one of the earmarks of the house of the 1960s.

• • •

THE DEVELOPMENT of double-paneled insulating glass in the 1930s made the trend toward window-walls possible. Previously large plate glass surfaces, tried in old-fashioned sun parlors, caused so much heat loss that the advantage of light and view were offset by chills.

Frank Sohn, architectural consultant for the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., looks back over those years and says architects and builders have always been aware of the popular preference for "more light in a home and a better opportunity to see the outside view."

• • •

THE INVENTION of sandwiching a dehydrated air space between two panes of glass, with edges sealed to keep out all moisture and dust, opened the way for new architectural designs. Tests showed that no more heat was lost through 115 square feet of such double glazing than through 65 square feet of single plate glass.

"One of the big advantages of factory-sealed insulating glass is that it can be used instead of storm windows," explains Architect Sohn. "It need never be removed and provides year-round insulation against heat or cold. It eliminates the bothersome jobs of removing, storing, washing and painting storm sash—as well as the risk of falling from a ladder."

Now, manufactured in 60 standard sizes, this type of glazing has been put within the reach of the popular-priced house. More than 5,000 homes built by Levitt & Sons on Long Island in the $8,000 range have used it for window walls.

A lesson is implicit in "Dream Hero," pointing out a practical way in which these youngsters can be helped in solving some of the problems of growing up. "Errand of Mercy," is heard at the same time each week on WMRN, presented in cooperation with the Marion County Chapter of the American Red Cross as a public service.

GROCERS TO FIX CEILING

Retail grocers as well as wholesalers are required to put ceiling prices on a long list of standard grocery items on May 14, district OPS director Edward F. Wagner of Columbus announced today. This means that all sellers have until the above date to calculate their prices on many items and determine their allowable ceiling prices under the regulation which effects them. Retail butchers are required to post, by June 4, the new ceiling prices for beef cuts which go into effect May 14, Mr. Wagner said. These beef prices will be effective until July 31. On that date, the Office of Price Administrator will put into effect the first of two ceiling price reductions. The next reduction will take place Oct. 1.

NO SIDEWALKS, SO PARENTS BLOCK BRIDGE OPENING. Angry residents of Whitaker, Pa., near Pittsburgh, form a human barricade with chairs for comfort, to prevent opening of new Rankin Memorial bridge. The "sitdown" stems from fact there are no sidewalks on the bridge's approach. Mothers declare they aren't going to have the bridge open to traffic "and have our children killed." The road was closed for two years during construction of the span.

G.I.s Released After Quiz By Red General

ON THE WESTERN FRONT, KOREA, May 5—(AP)—Fifteen U. S. Soldiers, captured by the Communists a week ago, returned to Allied lines last night and told of being interviewed by a Chinese general.

The men said they were well treated and were liberated twice—the second time after they were accidentaly recaptured.

"They treated us pretty well, especially after we were moved back from the frontline troops," said a soldier from Baltimore.

Censorship prevented immediate disclosure of the names of the Americans.

"The best one of all was the Chinese general we met—he was a big chunky man and very well dressed. He didn't speak English and used an interpreter. He asked us a lot about our family lives. I guess he was the one who made the decision to let us go."

The 15 were survivors of a party of infantrymen who were trapped by the Chinese.

Pushed Around

"Some of the frontline Chinks pushed us around a bit," said a soldier from West Virginia. "But things were a lot better when we got behind their lines. We got the same food the Chinks did—rice and fish heads—we did all our moving at night and they kept marching us back and forth to the 38th Parallel."

The men said all Chinese activities were carried on at night. The Reds and their prisoners lay hidden in their holes all day.

After their interview with the Chinese general the men were given safe conduct passes and sent south in a truck. Then they were told how to reach the Allied lines by making a left turn.

They were confused in the dark, took a right turn and blundered back into North Korean lines. The North Koreans read their passes but sent the GIs back to the Chinese—who sent them back on the right road again. They reached an outpost after dark last night and were immediately taken over by American officers.

Don't Fear Planes

"Our artillery is pretty damned good, but the Chinks don't think much of our airplanes," said a soldier from New York City.

"We caught hell from our own guns going north and coming back. The Chinese didn't like it either, but they laughed like crazy fools when our fighters came over on strafing runs. They would dive in their holes to get away from artillery, but they jumped up and laughed and shot at the planes. I think they were new to our planes. I don't think they will keep on doing it. Believe me, I was scared from the minute they got us to the minute they let us go. We're damned lucky to get out of it."

The men said a pretty North Korean nurse dressed their wounds at a Chinese medical aid station.

As soon as intelligence officers questioned the men, they were sent to Japan.

Metz

alleged failure to eliminate fire hazards and hold fire drills to alleged failure to investigate quality of food and provide sex instruction for growing girls. Most, however, were charges of failure to cooperate with school authorities, welfare department officials, Boy and Girl Scout officials, Y. M. C. A. officials, the Juvenile Court, a Child Welfare Board case worker, the Carnegie Library and the Board of Visitors.

Allege Malfeasance

Only two allegations were made in support of the charge of malfeasance. One of these was that Metz allegedly required boys under 16 to work in the home laundry, sometimes before 7 a.m. The second was that he allegedly refused to permit children to wear clothes provided by friends and relatives and sometimes gave such clothing to other children without permission of the donor or children.

Under the fifth charge, failures of good behavior, the board alleged that Mr. Metz talked to outsiders about children in the home in a derogatory manner, served a different menu to the children than to the home staff.

Similar charges were filed against Mrs. Ruth Metz but with fewer allegations.

HIT BY TYPHOON

There were no reports of casualties.

Marion in Midst of Baby Boom

Schools Lack Space For Increase in Enrollment

This is one of a series of articles explaining urgent need for passage at the May 8 primary of the $2,900,000 bond issue for a new senior high school and for modernization and addition of facilities at other schools. The articles were prepared by the Citizens' Committee formed to promote passage of the bond issue.

* * *

IN COMMON with other American communities, Marion is in the midst of a baby boom. In 1935 we had 528 births. Last year 772 children were born. These children will soon be entering our elementary schools.

This year our first grade enrollment is 640. By 1952 the number enrolled in the first grade will be 800, and by the following year more than 1,000. There are not enough elementary school classrooms in Marion for these children. Now we have 3,500 elementary school children, but by 1957-58 we shall have an enrollment of 4,800 in our elementary schools. Every available room not now in use will be readied for use before the increased enrollment hits us, but these will not be enough. We must have at least twenty new classrooms added to our present elementary school buildings.

Committee:
Harvey T. Gracely
Ben T. Want
Walter D. Moore

* * *

The present Vernon Junior High School building will be converted into an elementary school, but this added space will scarcely replace the Greenwood and Forest Lawn buildings that are to be abandoned. These two buildings have outlived their usefulness as modern schools, and many additional years of use will render them unsafe for school purposes. Like old automobiles, they must be replaced by newer models.

The bond issue to be voted May 8 will add rooms to our present elementary buildings to house the increased enrollment. Marion has never forgotten its children. It cannot afford to do so now. The bond issue May 8 comes just in time to enable the Board of Education to assure every child in Marion a proper school room when he reaches school age.

Falls on Head From Top Of Coal Car

A Manchester, O., man is in "good" condition in Marion City Hospital today after falling 15 feet from the top of a coal car and landing on his head. He is Leonard Rice, 57.

Sheriff's Deputies Elmer Ullom and Dick Ruth were called by railroad officials to remove three men from the top of a loaded coal car at 11:30 p.m. yesterday. The car was part of a C. & O. train which had stopped north of Marion to set several cars off on a siding.

Two of the men were standing up and the third, Rice, was lying down, Deputy Ullom said. He ordered the two to wake up Rice and all to get down. Deputy Ullom said all three appeared intoxicated.

After a few moments Rice started to rise but kept right on going. He fell backwards from the car and lit on his head on a rail. He was thought dead when the deputies reached him. Rice was taken to the hospital in the L. A. Axe ambulance.

The three men were arrested and charged with intoxication and train riding. Charges were filed by railroad detective C. W. Frost.

Gilbert Haislet, 53, and Richard Bostwick, 39, both of Portsmouth, were fined $50 and costs when they pleaded guilty to the two charges in Municipal Court today. They were taken to the Marion County jail when they were unable to pay their fines. Rice will have a hearing as soon as he can be released from the hospital.

Deputies Swap Hot Words

PARIS, May 5—(AP)—Russian and Western deputies exchanged more hot words today in their 44th meeting to map talks for a Big Four foreign ministers' conference. The result: continued deadlock over how the agenda item on disarmament should be worded.

Britain, France and the United States rejected Soviet deputy Andrei Gromyko's wording, which put disarmament of the Big Four only at the top.

Gromyko sounded off today with a bitter denunciation of "Western warmongers" and rejected the Western wording which provides for a study of the arms and armies of all nations leading to world-wide disarmament under international control.

Gromyko yesterday said Russia would accept the rest of the proposed Western agenda if the wording on this one item would be amended his way. Britain's Ernest Davies termed this an ultimatum and said: "It is very difficult to envisage a more cynical and negative proposition."

At the western rejection, Gromyko hotly declared: "Are we moving toward an agreement or not? We must sooner or later draw a conclusion to that effect."

He charged that Davies' statement was "typical Labor party demagoguery, which we have heard on other occasions."

Without getting any closer to agreement, the four delegations recessed until Monday.

Swallowed Diamond Recovered by Police

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—It took Oklahoma City police four days of patient waiting to recover a stolen diamond ring even after they had discovered exactly where it was.

Police found the $2,500 ring by standing a Kansas parolee in front of an X-ray machine. The ring showed up clearly in the suspect's stomach.

The parolee, who had been working as a plumber's helper in the fashionable Oklahoma City home from which the ring was stolen, was detained until the ring was retrieved.

SPOKANE, Wash. — (UP) — A small boy who became bored while his parents talked with a man in a "big building" spied a switch and pulled it. Within minutes the room filled with police, sheriff's officers and highway patrolmen. The child had pulled a burglar alarm switch at a suburban branch bank while his parents discussed a loan.

Love Triumphant

By ADELE GARRISON

I almost "upset the apple cart" myself with an audible chuckle as my fatuous father assured Faith that she would be permitted to have luncheon with her brother and her cousins before going to the palatial "owner's suite" of absent Philip Veritzen at the top of the Lansfield. But I caught it back in time to present a respectfully attentive face to him when he turned to me with appeal in his eyes and in his voice.

"This is your problem, I am afraid, Margaret," he said. "I confess I do not know just how to grant this request of Faith's. As I have told you, no one save Mr. Olsen and two trusted helpers know that young Peter, Faith, Mrs. Bickett, Madam Graham and myself are in the hotel, and I intend that no one shall get that knowledge save Phil's own trusted assistants. When I talked with him on long distance from the farm—in code—he told me to use them all as my own men. One of them will be at Katharine's call every hour of the twenty-four, for messages and aid, so that she need not leave the suite herself, or telephone 'for the duration,' and no one else save two or three trusted hotel employes will know that the suite is occupied.

"There is one waiter, Charles, in the dining room who can be trusted to keep his mouth shut," my father went on, "and eventually, the head of the room service staff will have to solve the problem of getting food to the Veritzen suite, but I do not know how to plan for a big luncheon in the suite on this first day before any plans have been made."

"Why have any food served up there today?" I asked, and repressed a smile at the blank amazement in my father's eyes. He is not accustomed to domestic planning, and his usual sense of strategy appeared to have taken to its heels and fled the scene.

"But, but—" he stammered. "I do not understand." Then his poise returned, and he gave me a little bow.

"However, you evidently do," he said, "so please elucidate."

"Suppose," I said, "that I order luncheon for ten in our own suite, saying that I have unexpected guests, and asking to have Charles serve us. Charles will bring another man to help him, for so large a luncheon, but I shall speak to him privately, and tell him to send the other man away as soon as the table is laid, and the first course is served, and not to have him come back until time to clear the table. Then, while the other man is in the room, I shall ask you, Mother Graham, Faith and Katharine with young Peter, to remain in the other rooms of the suite, not coming into the living room until the other man has gone, and leaving before he comes back to help clear the table, I also shall ask you to speak to Charles yourself, and give him whatever explanation you think best."

My voice trailed off into silence, and my father rose, and made me a stately little bow.

"A very excellent plan," he said. "I am chagrined that I did not have sense enough to think of it myself. But — we ought to get through with it as soon as possible. There is no imminent danger—I want to emphasize that—but I shall feel much better, when our—vulnerable—guests are safely in the Veritzen suite."

PREVIEWS OF COMING ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATERS

"Eagle and Hawk" On South Drive-In Bill

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are starred on the screen of the South Drive-In Theater, located on U S Route 23, two miles south of Marion, when the picture, "The Eagle and the Hawk," opens Sunday and Monday at the theater.

Playing Tuesday and Wednesday will be "The Red House," in which Edward G Robinson is starred.

A comedy with Abbott and Costello in the Foreign Legion will be presented through Saturday at the South Drive-In. Playing supporting roles in the film are Patricia Medina, Walter Slezak and Douglass Dumbrille.

As the picture opens, Abbott and Costello are seen in the roles of wrestling promoters in this country. Then the scene shifts to Algeria with the comics in hot pursuit of a wrestler. In Algeria they are tricked into enlisting in the Foreign Legion and it is then that their troubles really start.

"2 Weeks With Love" At Marion Drive-In

A musical production in technicolor, "Two Weeks With Love," starring Jane Powell and Ricardo Montalban will be shown Sunday through Tuesday at the Marion Drive-In Theater, located on U S Route 23, two miles north of Marion.

The attraction for Wednesday through Saturday will be "King Solomon's Mines," an adventure story filmed in technicolor and starring Deborah Kerr and Stewart Granger. Heading the supporting cast is Richard Carlson.

Adapted from H. Rider Haggard's spellbinding novel of a white woman who penetrates darkest Africa in search of her lost husband, "King Solomon's Mines" was filmed on a five-months safara covering 25,000 miles of equatorial Africa.

Technicolor Movies On Bill at State Theater

Two technicolor productions, "Frenchie" starring Joel McCrea and Shelley Winters and "High Lonesome" with John Barrymore Jr. and Chill Wills, will be shown Sunday and Monday at the State Theater.

Billed for Tuesday and Wednesday are "South Sea Sinner" and "Blue Lagoon" in technicolor. The former stars Macdonald Carey and Shelley Winters, and heading the cast in the latter are Jean Simmons and Noel Purcell.

Maureen O'Hara and Macdonald Carey are the stars of the technicolor film "Comanche Territory," which will be the main attraction of a double feature playing Thursday through Saturday. Completing the billing will be "Feudin' Rhythm" starring Eddie Arnold and Gloria Henry.

GARY COOPER AND JANE GREER are the co-stars of the comedy film "You're In the Navy Now," which is the main attraction of a double feature playing through Wednesday at the New Ohio Theater.

Gary Cooper Stars In Film at New Ohio

A double feature, "You're In The Army Now" starring Gary Cooper and Jane Greer and "Ghost Chasers" with Leo Gorcey and the Bowery Boys, now is playing through Wednesday at the New Ohio Theater, including a midnight show tonight.

The former film is concerned with the Navy's "90-day wonders" and the struggles with a top-secret projectile fired out with sub-chasers in World War II. Gary Cooper as an engineer who has never sailed a ship, is placed in command of a new type of submarine chaser, the fastest thing on the seas. The only thing wrong is that the mechanism of the ship is so mysterious it keeps exploding. Situations which result arising from the fact that the crew assigned to the ship knows nothing about the sea, are both funny and exciting.

"Ghost Chasers" deals with spiritism and finds Leo Gorcey and Huntz Hall setting out to break up racketeering among those who take them spiritualism in a very serious vein.

Billed to start Thursday at the Ohio is another double feature, "Fourteen Hours" and "The Admiral Was A Lady."

Starring Paul Douglas, Richard Basehart, Barbara Bel Geddes and Debra Paget, "Fourteen Hours" tells the story of a confused young man who ventures out on to a precarious ledge of an upper story of a tall office building and holds the city at bay by day and night while he is persuaded not to jump.

"The Admiral Was A Lady" stars Edmond O'Brien and Wanda Hendrix and features Rudy Vallee. It is concerned with the hectic experiences of four ex-GI's as they try to keep an ex-WAVE, played by Wanda Hendrix, from leaving town in order to marry a character named Henry.

Tracy, Bennett, Taylor Star in Palace Movie

"Father's Little Dividend," the follow-up story to the comedy hit "Father of the Bride," opens Sunday at the Palace Theater and will continue through Wednesday.

Starred are Spencer Tracy, Joan Bennett and Elizabeth Taylor, while Don Taylor and Billie Burke are featured.

In the original story, as it ended, Spencer Tracy as Stanley Banks and Joan Bennett as Mrs. Banks were exhausted but happy at having launched their daughter Kay played by Elizabeth Taylor, over the threshold from grown-up daughter to budding bride.

The new adventures of the family in "Father's Little Dividend" revolve about the funny and human happenings dealing with Stanley Banks becoming a grandfather.

Action in the film includes the excitement of the baby's birth, jealousies between the respective parents-in-law, each of whom wants a hand in the raising of the young heir, and the inevitable spat and reconciliation between the inexperienced young married couple.

Billed for Thursday through Saturday is a double feature, "Air Cadet," a story of the jet flyers starring Stephen McNally, Gail Russell, Alex Nicol, Richard Long, Peggie Castle, Charles Drake and Rock Hudson and "Inside Straight" starring David Brian, Arlene Dahl, Barry Sullivan, Mercedes McCambridge and Paula Raymond with Claude Jarman Jr. and Lon Chaney.

"Air Cadet" tells the dramatic story of the training of jet fighter pilots for Uncle Sam's air squadron, a story which unfolds simultaneously with a love story about a handsome young cadet who falls in love with his Chief Instructor's estranged wife.

"Inside Straight" has San Francisco's get-rich-quick era of the late 1800's as its background and tells a story of fortunes made and lost overnight on speculations in mining stocks, of ruthlessly ambitious men who started out in dingy hotel bedrooms and ended up in mansions on Nob Hill and of women who made fools of them.

Blondie, Roy Rogers' Films on Marion Bill

"Blondie Goes To College" a re-released comedy based on the popular comic strip characters created by Chic Young and "Spoilers of the Plains" starring Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger, will be shown Sunday and Monday at the Marion Theater.

Starring Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms and featuring Janet Blair, the former film has its beginning when Dagwood discovers he is practically a moron, and decides he wants to play football. So Blondie and Dagwood enter college, but their married life must be kept concealed. They attempt a campus flirtation which is interrupted when the school's ace athlete makes a play for Blondie and the campus queen decides Dagwood is cute.

"Spoilers of the Plains" tells an exciting story about a gang of western crooks employed to perform some unusual dirty work for a foreign agent.

Billed for Tuesday and Wednesday is the film, "Bitter Rice."

Playing Thursday through Saturday will be "Mask of the Dragon" and "Cherokee Uprising."

Try Again To Save Life Of Bircham

Another plea to save Earl D. Bircham from the electric chair was heard by Kentucky's Court of Appeals yesterday, The Associated Press reported from Frankfort, Ky.

The commonwealths' highest court last Feb. 6 upheld the death penalty given the outlaw upon conviction in Louisville of shooting policeman John Tennyson.

Today's oral arguments were on a petition for reconsideration and reversal of the conviction. Claims were made that Bircham didn't have a fair trial.

Bircham, 46, engaged in a gunfight with Tennyson and policeman John A. Ross after they tried to halt him and his wife, June, 28, for turning the wrong way into a one-way street. Bircham, a former Marion man, was being sought by the FBI at that time as a fugitive from robbery charges in Tennessee, Ohio and Kansas.

Bircham had wrecked his car during the chase. After his bullets gave out he was captured by Luther Williams, whose car Bircham had demanded.

Marsox Walloped 16-7; Newark Stays Over

THE BOYS TAKE NOTICE. Margaret Dobson, Vanport College freshman, demonstrates throwing arm which helped her earn an infield berth on her Portland, Ore., team

Rival Teams Find Local Hurlers Soft

By JOHN SHORT

Marsox Manager Elmer Yoter today was offering his kingdom for a couple of effective hurlers after his pitching staff has given up 34 runs in their last two games.

Nothing worked last night as the Newark Yankees pushed 16 runs across the plate and sprayed 17 hits to all parts of the ball park. Four Marion hurlers took part in the 16-7 massacre.

Bobo Salerno opened on the mound for the locals but after retiring leadoff man Bill Lege he gave up a double to Newark Skipper Bunny Mick. Stan Rosenzweig followed with a single to right to drive in the first Yankee marker.

Three In Third

The Yankees added three runs in the third inning and clinched the verdict with a seven-run spree in the fourth when 11 batters marched to the plate.

Fiery Elmer Yoter tangled with Umpire Sandy Groves early in last night's donnybrook. In the first frame, with Jim Evanik on first, he sent the speedy second baseman to second. Newark's John Sullivan's pitch was inside to Dick Brodowski, who dodged the heave. Brodowski, evidently was in the catcher's line of throw and the heave went into centerfield. Evanik was returned to first by the umpires while Elmer protested vehemently.

Seven Errors

Seven fielding miscues by the Marsox aided in the Newark scoring. Four of the errors were chalked up in the big seven-run fourth.

Second Baseman Evanik was

James Evanik

(First in a Series)

Holding down the keystone position for the 1951 edition of the Marion Red Sox is James Evanik, 20, of North Arlington, N. J. "Rush," as he is called by fans in his home town, is in his first year of professional baseball.

The 20-year-old, 170-pound second baseman graduated from Kearny High School at North Arlington and attended Panzer College in New Jersey for one year. His biggest diamond thrill came during his stay at Panzer when as a fresman he led the Panzer varsity in batting with a blistering .430. Last year in the New Jersey Essex County Loop, Jim lost the batting title and $100 by one point after he finished with a spectacular .470.

During the off season, Rush, who is a television fan of the first water, works as a television technician. In addition to being an all-around performer on the diamond, Jim also has spent time playing basketball, football and track.

Tax Bill Faces Springfield

For Rent On Ball Park

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 5 —(AP)—The city of Springfield got a tax bill of $881.20 for Municipal Stadium yesterday but its an "iffy" question just who's going to pay it.

The Springfield Giants baseball club of the Ohio-Indiana League rents the ball park for $200 a year. They recently signed a five-year lease and the city reduced the rent from $500 to help the team over the financial hurdle.

Under the lease, the club agreed to pay any and all taxes, but City Solicitor Robert Acton and team secretary Bob Ireland said the tax issue was not thought of at the time the contract was signed.

Normally, city property is tax exempt. But County Auditor E. E. Stabler apparently acted in the wake of an Ohio Supreme Court decision last summer.

That decision concerned the Municipal Stadium in Cleveland. The high court ruled that because the stadium was being used exclusively for private purposes—the Cleveland Indians and Browns had exclusive use agreements — it was no longer being used for public purposes and hence subject to tax.

Auditor Stabler said yesterday he had been directed by the State Tax Department to place the stadium on the tax duplicate. City Manager R. M. Hosington said there was little the city could do further to help the team.

Under the law, the city or the baseball club can appeal the assessment to the State Board of Tax Appeals.

Indians Top Blues In Association

By The Associated Press

Indianapolis evened its American Association record at seven wins and seven losses with a 10-8 victory over second-place Kansas City last night.

A win for the Blues would have put them within .007 percentage points of leading Milwaukee. The Brewers (10-4), who were idle are one-half game ahead of Kansas City (11-6).

Another 10-8 score was tallied at St. Paul, with Toledo the winner over the Saints in 10 innings.

Mo Mozzali's fourth hit of the game, a double, drove in the winning run in the ninth inning as Columbus beat host Minneapolis, 8-7.

Louisville at Milwaukee was not scheduled.

Harding Thinclads Sweep Annual Night Relays

Findlay Places Second; Prexies Receive Trophy

Coach Ken Somerlot's Harding High School tracksters won their second Harding Night Relays yesterday at the stadium. They piled up 92 points to second-place Findlay's 67½. Bexley finished third with 49 points and Galion netted 9.

Big Paul Ludwig was high point man for the meet as he posted 19½ points for the Prexies. Bill Garnes of Findlay scored 19 and Tom Montague was third high with 18¾.

New stadium records were set in five events and two others were tied. Eleven new records were made for the Night Invitational and a 12th was tied.

Morral Winner

In the special Marion County 880-yard relay, Morral and Pleasant battled all the way with Morral taking the decision. Edison Junior High School won the junior high in another special race. The winning Edison crew will represent Marion at the Newark Relays today.

Paul Ludwig set a new low hurde record when he ran the course in 20.7 and tied the high hurdle mark in 15.7. John Ashworth of Harding lowered the 880-yard run time to 2:8.5. Bill Garnes, Findlay ace cleared 5-9¼ in the high jump for a new record and set a new mark in the 440 dash with 53 seconds. Findlay's 880 relay team also set a new stadium mark by coming from behind to win in 1:35.5. Montague of Bexley lowered the mark for the 220-yard dash to 22.5.

Cecil Gabler, Harding High School principal, presented the Midtown Chevrolet trophy to the Prexy crew. Medals and ribbons were presented to the individual winners.

Harding's next appearance will be Tuesday afternoon when they meet Galion at the stadium. It will be the last home appearance for the Prexies and will serve as a warmup for the Buckeye League meet at Fostoria on May 10. Findlay will be defending champions at the night meet.

Members of the winning Morral crew were Ron Craycraft, Dallas Campbell, Gene Morrow and Huston Ackley. Their winning time was 1.43.3.

Athletics Rise Up To Smite Lofty Tribe, 3-1

CLEVELAND, May 5—(AP)—For the second time this week the Cleveland Indians failed to get runs for Early Wynn last night and thus dropped the opener of a two-game series with Philadelphia, 3-1.

The loss enabled the New York Yankees to vault into first place over Cleveland and Washington, also beaten last night.

This afternoon the Athletics and the Tribe close out their initial series with Mike Garcia (1-0) hurling against the visitors' Bobby Shantz or Dick Fowler. Washington comes in tomorrow for a doubleheader followed by a single game Monday.

Last night the Tribe had runners on second and third and none out in the ninth but couldn't push over those two runs needed to tie. Al Rosen led off with a single and Larry Doby doubled off Alex Kellner, who had allowed only four singles to that point and had struck out six.

Reliefer Takes Over

Manager Jimmy Dykes decided not to chance it with Kellner and called in Bob Hooper, a sophomore righthander. Hooper got pinchhitter Milt Nielson (batting for Bob Kennedy), Ray Boone and Jim Hegan—all on pop flies. "The slider did the job," Hooper, a 29-year-old Canadian, explained.

Last night Wynn gave only seven hits and fanned five, but in the fourth frame Dave Philley tripled, the next two batters walked, and Bill Hitchcock connected for a two-run double. The third runner crossed the plate on Pete Suder's fly.

Cleveland's lone tally on six hits off southpaw Kellner was made in the sixth when Dale Mitchell walked, took second on Ferris Fain's wild throw after Bob Avila's grounder, and scored on Rosen's single.

The crowd of 12,185 chilled by a temperature in the low 50s, saw the sensational hitting streak of Rookie Harry Simpson come to an end. Simpson, who had a perfect four-for-four Wednesday and two of three the day before against Boston, grounded into a double play his first time up, was called out on strikes in the fourth and flied out his last two trips.

Giants' Maglie Stops Pirates On One-Hitter

NEW YORK, May 5—(AP)—Sal Maglie, veteran curve ball artist of the New York Giants, just loves to pitch against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

It seems that all the 34-year-old righthander has to do to beat the Pirates is toss his glove on the mound.

Maglie turned in the pitching feat of his career before a sparse gathering of 3,947 fans at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon — 5-1 one-hit victory over the Pirates. It was the second one-hitter in the majors this year. Cor. Marrero of Washington performed the trick against Philadelphia last month.

Pete Castiglione ruined Maglie's no-hit bid with a triple. Castiglione, currently on a hot bat spree, lashed Maglie's second pitch of the game between left fielder Whitey Lockman and center fielder Bob Thomson. He scored when Gus Bell grounded out.

Bell spoiled Maglie's bid for a record last year. Maglie had turned in four straight shutouts when he faced the Pirates in the Polo Grounds on Sept. 5. He needed one more to tie the major league record of five and also was after former Giant Carl Hubbell's National League record of 46 and one-third consecutive scoreless innings.

Maglie blanked the Pirates until the seventh inning when Bell hit a cheap home run against the right field foul pole to end the string at 45 innings.

Sal was especially rough on the Pirates in 1950, his first season in the big time since he jumped to Mexico in 1946. He beat the Pirates six times without a loss, and two were shutouts.

Maglie's feat yesterday squared his record at 2-2 and it also marked his first route-going victory performance.

La Starza Puts Mitchell Away

NEW YORK, May 5—(AP)—Now Roland La Starza wants to fight Rex Layne.

The Bronx heavyweight set his sights on an outdoor bout with the kid from Utah after he knocked out Vern Mitchell of Detroit in 1:38 of the eighth round last night at St. Nicholas Arena. It was his first appearance on network TV since October.

Usually a cautious Nellie, La Starza turned tiger to blot out Mitchell in the eighth. The bell saved a badly battered Mitchell in the seventh. La Starza weighed 189, Mitchell 191¼ for the bout that attracted only 1,630 paying $3,278.

La Starza has given up hope of forcing a return bout with Rocky Marciano, unbeaten Brockton, Mass., heavy who was the only man to win over him in 46 fights.

"Give us Layne and we'll be ready for Ezzard Charles next winter," said Jimmy Deangelo, Rollie's manager. "It looks like they're never going to give us another shot at Marciano."

Smith Going Great For Cincy Reds

BROOKLYN, May 5 —(AP)—What's new with the Cincinnati Reds? Quite a bit.

For one thing, they racked up their first victory of the season over the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday, 5-4, and reliefer Frank Smith looked great as he protected starter Howie Fox from being blackened with his first loss.

Smith hurled for the Marion club in the Ohio State League in 1946. One of his victories was a no-hit game against Lima in August.

For another, the Rhinelander finally located the left-handed pinch hitter they were looking for in Philadelphia. They purchased outfielder Barney McCoskey from the lowly Athletics. No figures for the American League bargain basement deal were disclosed. The price, however, probably wasn't too far from the $10,000 waiver price on the 33-year-old former Detroit Tiger.

And one thing more. Bonus Baby Gerry Blackburn, the left-handed pitcher the Reds shelled out $35,000 for, is Army-bound. He has left the Reds' Tulsa farm for his home in Kannapolis, N. C., where he is slated to be inducted May 9. Blackburn is 20 years old.

Smith looked like money in the bank as he pitched five courageous innings of relief. He was terrific in the clutch. Although constantly in deep water, he managed to keep the hard-hitting Brooklynites from scoring after replacing Fox in the fifth, with two men on and none out.

The Dodgers got off on top, picking up a run in the opening heat on Duke Snider's 375-foot poke into the lower deck of the left centerfield stands—his fifth. Four singles, two of them coming after a double play, enabled the Redlegs to even the score in the third.

Mulbry Brands Chandler, Former Boss, "Egomaniac"

CINCINNATI, O., May 5—(UP)—Walter Mulbry said today that he was not fired as secretary-treasurer of baseball by Commissioner A. B. Chandler, but quit because he had "taken all the bickering I could stomach."

Mulbry also branded Chandler "an egomaniac who shows by his action that he is a little man."

Mulbry said he notified the club owners that he was through but was asked to stay for 24 hours "so something could be worked out." This happened a few hours before Chandler announced on April 27 the executive committee had accepted his resignation, according to Mulbry.

Mulbry said that in asking his resignation be approved, he remarked: "I've had all of this I can stomach. I'm getting out right now. That's when I walked out, not when Chandler dictated that statement to the papers."

When contacted at his home in Versailles, Ky., Chandler said he had "no comment" to make on Mulbry's statements.

Reports of dissention in the commissioner's office, between the two who had been friends since college days, started when the club owners last December surprised Chandler by not voting to renew his contract. Chandler then accused his assistant of disloyalty and being the cause of the dissatisfaction, and asked the club owners to give him "the satisfaction of firing" Mulbry.

Lopat Hurls Yankees Into League Lead With 8-1 Decision Over Browns

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

Eddie Lopat, the New York Yankees "hot weather pitcher" is very warm for May. With a 4-0 record, the chunky southpaw is well on the way to his first 20-game season. He stopped the Browns 8-1 yesterday.

He used to insist he couldn't win unless the June sun hit 90. Professor Casey Stengel gave him a session in psychology.

Casey's observation in my mind was [illegible] a lot of bunk.

That is, Lopat's remarks that the Yanks have edged into first place earlier than usual. Last year it took them until May 16.

An Event

It's an event when anybody scores a run on Lopat this spring. Sturgeon's astute club again caused the Brownies Manager Marty Marion zoomed his second homer over the right field pavilion and Gil McDougald, playing second for a slugging Coleman, doubled and singled.

Chico Carrasquel's double in the 10th inning gave Chicago a 6-5 edge over Washington, knocking the Senators out of the American League lead. Mary Rothlatt was the winner and Joe Haynes the loser.

Hal Newhouser finally got into the win column as Detroit jolted the Boston Red Sox, 8-4. Two of the five Sox hits were homers by Bobby Doerr and Vern Stephens.

Dick Kryhoski and Jerry Priddy a double and a single. Each drove in three runs.

While the Red Sox continued to have their troubles on the road, the Boston Braves thrive on their home stand. With Vern Bickford winning his fourth on a five-hitter, the Braves slipped back into first place in the National, downing Chicago, 9-3.

Bob Elliott backed up Bickford's steady work with two home runs. Hank Sauer hit one for the Cubs.

EDDIE LOPAT

Umpire Jocko Conlan warned both clubs after one batter had to duck quickly and another was hit by a pitched ball.

In the Boston half of the inning, Bob Rush's first pitch to Ebba St. Claire went behind him. Conlan talked to Rush. Then he addressed both benches. Nobody else was hit.

Sal Maglie threw a one-hitter at Pittsburgh, 5-1, as the New York Giants backed him up with homers by Hank Thompson, Bobby Thomson, Monte Irvin and Spider Jorgensen.

The hit was a triple by leadoff man Pete Castiglione in the first.

Pitcher Russ Meyer won his own game with a two-run single in the Phillies 6-4 decision over the St. Louis Cards. Howie Pollet, who held out all during spring training, was knocked out in a four-run first inning. It was his first start.

Cincinnati scattered 14 Brooklyn hits for a 5-4 win with some shutout relief work by Frank Smith. The towering righthander came to the relief of Howie Fox in the fifth.

Paul Beveridge Named President

Credit Union Formed at McMillen

A credit union, organized to promote thrift and to accumulate a fund from savings to make needed loans to members, has been established at the Marion plant of McMillen Feed Mills, Division of Central Soya Co.

Known as the Soya Federal Credit Union, the corporation was chartered by the federal government through the Bureau of Federal Credit Unions.

Officers of the organization are headed by Paul Beveridge as president. They were elected at an organizational meeting held last week at Local 750 Union Hall.

Other officers are Wilbur Wills, vice president; Mrs. Eleanor Altman, treasurer; Russell Wenger, secretary; Vince Clement, Paul Thomas, and Miss Joan Stuber, directors; Donald Rhodes, Harry Strawser and Paul Wintgens, credit committee; Miss Ellen Ault, Harold Iams and Larry Wenger, supervisory committee.

William G. White, field representative of the Ohio Credit Union League, assisted the McMillen employes in submitting their application for a charter.

He explained the Federal Credit Unions encourage their members to use their share accounts to accumulate savings out of income as a means of building economic security for themselves and families and as a means of protecting them from demoralizing worries. In addition, Credit Unions provide loans for emergency and any other purposes which are worthwhile for their members, such as consolidation of debts, payment of medical bills and financing of purchase and repairs of automobiles. In these two ways Credit Unions help their members to help themselves to a greater degree of financial stability, he said.

Net earnings from loan operations or other sources may be returned to the members in the form of dividends, except that 20 percent of the net earnings are set aside in a reserve for bad loans. Federal Credit Union by-laws limit dividends to six percent per year.

The Marsox and Yankees will meet at the Lincoln Park ballyard again tonight. Game time is 8 p.m.

Rev 'Doc' Waddell, Circus Pastor, In Marion Today

Registered at the Hotel Harding is the preacher Coronet Magazine titled "That Peculiar Man of God." He registers: "Rev. Don Waddell," gives his residence "Everywhere," which he interprets "Columbus, O." and "The World," and his business "Scattering Sunshine." He is an 87 years young Methodist Evangelist, has been with circuses 80 continuous years, and since Mills Bros. Circus started 12 years ago, has been pastor of its "canvas church." This circus and the canvas temple of worship is in Marion for today only on the Crystal Lake Park show grounds.

This morning, Rev. Waddell had "church" for his unique congregation of 500 souls, representing 18 different races of people. In all the world, there is not another church like it. It has no rites or processionals, no collection is ever taken, and Rev. Waddell gets no salary.

This morning, a "remembrance ceremony" paid memory tribute to Waddell's old friends: President Warren G. Harding and wife, Dr. James Knapp, Mike Waddell, Edward Staiger, Editor George VanFleet, the late past Grand Patron of the Eastern Star, Brother Capehart, and all show folk and friends of the circus buried here. Today's performances Rev. Waddell dedicated to The Marion Star, its writers and employes; Mrs. Richard Morgan and the Junior Women's Board of the Marion City Hospital, sponsors of the circus in Marion today; the Shriners and the Eastern Stars. Rev. Waddell is a past grand patron of Eastern Star in Ohio, and with Jack and Jake Mills, circus owners, are nobles of Aladdin Shrine Temple, Columbus.

40 Midget Racers To Run At Marion Speedway Sunday

Forty midget racers will roar into the Marion Speedway Sunday for the opening of the track's five-month racing season and a crack at the state midget-car championship.

Feature of the first racing date will be the championship race — postponed from last fall because of weather conditions then. Sanctioned by the Tri-State Midget Association, the race will draw some of the top midget drivers in the midwest. At least 40, and perhaps 60, drivers will vie for the title. The title race will be 50 laps.

Mayor Harold Robinson, of Marion, will present the trophies.

Gates at the track—five miles north of Marion on route 23 — will open at 11. Time trials start at 12 and races begin promptly at 2:30.

Following Sunday's program, races will be held every Sunday through September. The first big-car race in the history of the Marion Speedway will be held May 20th.

Local drivers will be Paul Hooper and Louie Louck.

MacArthur

General MacArthur nearly broke down at one point.

They said this came when he was discussing the pattern of the Korean war from the time the enemy was thrown at the 38th Parallel down to the loss of Maj. Gen. William F. Dean.

Tears came to his eyes and he had to stop and pause," Moody said.

Dean disappeared last July 20 during the battle for Taejon He was later reported passing ammunition to a bazooka team during the desperate fighting of those days when U. S forces were threatened with complete defeat

The deposed Pacific commander declared it would take only a "relatively small fraction" of the total U S manpower goal of 3,500,000 to carry out his proposed campaign in Asia.

MacArthur had advocated the bombing of Chinese Manchurian bases, a blockade of Communist China and use of Chinese Nationalist troops from Formosa.

President Truman and administration leaders have opposed this policy on the ground that it might lead to another great war. They have taken the position the fighting should be confined to Korea if possible to prevent the entry of Red Chinese troops into the conflict.

Manpower Angle

Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex) opened the Senate general discussion of his program on the issue today.

MacArthur told him "I will say I consider your basic question, that I have stated the overall strength which would be required now or ultimately, would well encompass without prejudice to any other operations or demands that may be made upon it, the concept of what I had in mind in the Far East."

He could only base a relative estimate of the size of that force to carry on the campaign that I was then in mind."

MacArthur said that to utilize fully the power in the Far East, there should be added increments of both the air and the ground.

Such reinforcements would not be available without preparation of the area of operations which he had in contemplation," he said.

Release Available Power

Johnson persisted, MacArthur said he believed the power could be released so that it can be used in the Korean area.

He said that the preparedness program is expected to be completed and in effect at some future date of the order, he mentions, whatever it may be.

Marshal Next

The Senate armed services and foreign affairs committees, made up of 24 senators are sitting in a joint session to hear testimony from Gen. Douglas MacArthur who for fourteen years was the boss of Far Eastern policy.

The ex-Far East Secretary of Defense Marshall, completing the committee roster of MacArthur witnesses, likely figures also are to be heard.

Marshall may get into the witness chair on Monday, it has been anticipated, to explain his MacArthur. Yesterday MacArthur testified he understood Marshall had a different view on the Joint Chiefs of Staff plan taken the position that Nationalist Formosa must be the Chinese Communists' admission of Red China to United Nations might be used to bring Korean peace offensive. But MacArthur said he did not believe that would be accepted as [illegible]

Newsmen are barred from the committee sessions but are given a stenographic report of what is said after it first goes through censors for removal of anything they think might hurt the nation-security if made public.

Senators coming in and out of the sessions also give reporters information.

Won't Discuss Troops

Senator McCarran (D-Nev) told them soon after the hearing that MacArthur had refused to discuss the "troops-to-Europe" dispute on grounds it involved "political controversy" He said Senator Johnson had sought MacArthur's views on how many troops should be sent to Europe to oppose communism there.

The Senate, after a lengthy dispute, adopted a resolution endorsing the sending of four more divisions of ground forces, in addition to two already there

McCarran said MacArthur flatly refused to get into that dispute.

He said MacArthur told Johnson Congress should accept the advice of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and top military leaders on such questions.

The troops sent to Europe are to serve in the armies being organized under Gen. Dwight D Eisenhower as a force to defend Western Europe against possible Communist aggression.

MacArthur, in testimony to the senators, has repeatedly said he believes the United States has the strength to meet communism at all points—that increasing its strength in Korea, as he proposes, would not necessarily mean exposing Europe to greater danger.

Two Senate committees—armed services and foreign relations—are jointly making a general inquiry into President Trumans dismissal of MacArthur from his Far Eastern commands and the policy differences involved in that action

It was the third day of testimony for MacArthur, their first witness.

Questions Deletion

The first section of today's testimony showed Senator George (D-Ga.)) inquiring about the deletion of testimony by MacArthur Thursday that he was refused permission to bomb a major Communist supply point in North Korea near the Russian border.

While cut out of the public record, this testimony was relayed to newsmen by two senators, and George, absent from the previous hearings because of illness, asked about it

Chairman Russell agreed that such testimony was given and added:

'In my opinion the matter was covered very fully in the hearings The town was identified The inhibitions were explained and the value of an attack upon that particular position was clearly stated by General MacArthur All of that matter was deleted"

George said he was "surprised at the deletion"

Russell said the matter had been referred to Senators Knowland (R-Calif) and McMahon (D-Conn), acting as a subcommittee to inquire into the reason for the deletion.

In opening the third day of the hearings, Chairman Russell remarked that the inquiry "threatened to become a marathon session."

"Of course," Russell said, "with General MacArthur, the hearing only is beginning"

He added that other government officials would be called after MacArthur concludes his testimony.

Few Senators Present

Fewer than 20 senators were on hand when doors of the hearing room were closed for the renewed questioning of the 71-year-old general.

There are 25 members of the two Senate committees—armed services and foreign relations—which are inquiring into MacArthur's ouster as Far Eastern commander and the policy differences between him and the Truman administration over conduct of the Korean war.

However, other senators are permitted to attend the sessions as observers. On Thursday and Friday, at least half the 96 senators were present during most of MacArthur's testimony.

The general has been commuting between New York and Washington by plane during the hearings

Showing no signs of fatigue from his strenuous schedule he arrived at the airport at 8:56 a m, EST this morning and got to the hearing room before any of the senators

There were only a few spectators at the airport

MacArthur went directly to the Senate office building where the two Senate committees are hearing his testimony.

Appears Rested

About 50 persons were on the sidewalks in front of the building to greet MacArthur. Appearing fresh and rested, he waved to the greeters and got a cheer in return

MacArthur went immediately to the Senate caucus room where the hearings are held.

There were no senators outside the office building to greet MacArthur when he arrived and none in the caucus room when he reached there.

On Thursday, his first day of testimony, Senators Byrd (D-Va) and Bridges (R-NH) went to the airport to meet him and escort him to Capitol Hill.

Yesterday, Byrd and Bridges met the general outside the office building

Today, his only official greeters were capitol police and attaches.

Friday's Hearing Highlights

Summary Of Main Points In MacArthur Testimony

WASHINGTON May 5—(AP)—Here is a summary of the main points from the eight hours testimony yesterday by Gen. Douglas MacArthur before the Senate foreign relations and armed services committees

A news conference statement by President Truman that MacArthur had not allowed the Central Intelligence Agency, (CIA) to operate in his command until persuaded to do so by its chief was all tommyrot" MacArthur said

He said his "summary" dismissal on April 11 was "the judgment of one individual" This was apparently President Truman.

MacArthur said he had never attributed to (secretary of state) Acheson in the slightest degree the decision of the President to replace me"

MacArthur was answering a question in which Senator Fulbright (D-Ark) asked whether MacArthur would be surprised to know that Acheson in fact opposed your recall vigorously."

MacArthur expressed "complete" confidence in Gen Omar N Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and in the three joint chiefs Fulbright told him Senator Taft (R-Ohio), a strong MacArthur backer, had "no confidence" in General Bradley In a free country, MacArthur responded 'Every fellow can have his own opinion"

War Not Inevitable

War with Russia, in MacArthur's opinion, is not inevitable He would not favor bombing Russian supply lines, in Manchuria, leading to Korea

War, in general, he said, has proved itself "inherently a failure"

MacArthur refused to identify Soviet Russia as America's chief enemy He named instead, worldwide communism.

The loss of Formosa would "invite a third world war"

"A very modest military effort on our part" in broadening pressure on Red China could "bring an end to the Korean slaughter" The U S. should give Nationalist China "reasonable support."

The Red Chinese, the general said are now making their maximum effort in Korea.

Secretary of Defense Marshall, General MacArthur said, vetoed a decision by the Joint Chiefs of Staff that the future of Formosa, and Communist China's admission to the U. N should be excluded from the agenda of any peace talks on Korea

MacArthur said he never received instructions from the U N not to cross the 38th Parallel in Korea

"Leadership" he said, would bring America's U.N. Allies into agreement with his Asia policies

Had Joint Chiefs' OK

His military dispositions in Korea had "the prior knowledge and approval of the Joint Chiefs of Staff"

What he called in November an "end-the-war" push to get "the boys home by Christmas" was a "reconnaissance in force" the outcome of which depended on circumstances

He would not object to public criticism of his policies by a subordinate officer, if done in a "courteous polite way"

"The American people are entitled to certain basic facts," he added, "when it involves the lives of their sons and perhaps the future of our country"

His March 20 letter to Rep. Martin, House Republican leader, was "merely a routine communication, such as I turned out by the hundreds." He said he did not have the "faintest idea" whether it was to be published.

YES—I KNOW IT'S AFTER NINE O'CLOCK—IT'S A DARK, STORMY NIGHT OUTSIDE AN' THE WIND IS HOWLIN'—I'M AWFUL LUCKY—
LUCKY?
SURE—IF IT WAS A NICE, STARRY NIGHT SOMEBODY MIGHT SEE ME SNEAKIN' OUTA THE HOME—THEY'D TELL THE MATRON—
I NEVER THOUGHT OF THAT—
ZERO IS ON A HUNGER STRIKE—HE'S CHAINED UP AT THE GAS STATION AN' HE WON'T EAT ANYTHING UNLESS HE GETS IT FROM ME—
BUT AREN'T YOU AFRAID TO GO OUT ALL ALONE ON SUCH A TERRIBLE NIGHT?
I SAID I WOULDN'T BE SCARED, WHEN I WAS INSIDE—BUT OUT HERE IN ALL THE STORMY DARK I JUST CAN'T HELP FEELIN' KINDA SHIVERY—

Just as I Am

The doctor stopped his carriage at the Angelican parsonage in Brighton, England. But there was nothing in his medicine kit to help the paralyzed sister of the Rev. Henry V. Elliott. He was calling to offer his usual word of cheer and to leave one of the little leaflets he had bought to distribute among his shut-in patients.

The leaflets were selling all over England, he said, and were being translated into many foreign languages. And for a good cause, too. Someone had written a poem to help finance the building of a school for children of poor clergymen. It said so at the top of the page. . . . "Sold for the benefit of St. Margaret's Hall, Brighton." Under that, the line, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Then came the six-verse poem.

Tears welled in Charlotte Elliott's eyes as she read the lines. Her memory went back to the day her brother had organized a bazaar to start his school. Everybody in town had helped. That is, everybody except her . . . a 46-year-old spinster who could hardly drag about the room.

Lonely and helpless, she had written a poem to console other invalids. She had sent it to a publisher in the hope that from its sale she could contribute a few shillings to her brother's school. And now, her little poem was bringing in more revenue than all the bazaars the town could give.

The doctor was pleased with his call. He had left his patient so happy that she was crying.

The following year Charlotte Elliott published a whole book of hymns and she wrote many another before she died at the age of 82. Perhaps the good doctor might have wept a little himself that day in 1834 had he known it was his patient who had written. . . .

Just as I am, without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidd'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

Just as I am, though tossed about
With many a conflict, many a doubt,
Fightings and fears within, without,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

Just as I am—poor, wretched, blind;
Sight, riches, healing of the mind,
Yea, all I need in Thee to find,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

Just as I am—Thou wilt receive,
Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve,
Because Thy promise I believe,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

Beware False Prophets

A Sermonette

By REV. WILLIAM REEVES
Pastor of Wesley Methodist Church

"Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravenous wolves." —Matthew 7-15.

JESUS honored the Prophets and quoted them freely. The truth proclaimed by the Prophets throughout the centuries continued to live; and when the Great Prophet of Nazareth appeared, He gathered from His predecessors all that was permanent and divine, and, quickening it by His own mighty personality, He sent it down the ages until by its life-giving power it should quicken all men and make them friends of God, and Prophets.

The true Prophets, pure in character, strong in intellect, sincere in purpose, quickened through personal communion with God, enlightened by the Divine Spirit, were able to see facts and understand truths hidden from the eyes of those who did not live in the same intimate fellowship with Jehovah. These men possessed of divine ideals of righteousness, and eager to realize those ideals in their nation, sought to impress the truths burned by the Divine Spirit upon their hearts and minds—upon their less enlightened contemporaries. "The Prophet spoke for God and was therefore more a forthteller than a 'foreteller'."

• • •

THE RISE of "false prophets" is clearly recorded in both Old and New Testaments. In the course of the centuries, the prophetic office grew in influence, and this increase in power became in itself a danger, for it attracted many recruits who were without the prophetic spirit, and who became prophets simply because the office seemed to assure an easy and comfortable living. These prophets undermined the influence of the true prophets. Two classes of "false prophets" may be distinguished: On the one hand, the mercenary prophets who are described by Micah (3-5) in these words, "And as for the prophets, the Eternal says, who lead my folk astray, who cry "All's well." if they get food to eat, and often war on any who refuse them." These prophets were following the sentiment, "Whose bread I eat, his song I sing." On the other hand, there were the political prophets who unlike the mercenary prophets, may have been sincere at first, but who lost sight of the religious mission and destiny of the nation, and whose utterances were determined entirely by political ambitions. They were prophets "who had their price."

The "false prophets" are not all dead. Their voices are heard in the land every day. They use every modern device to deceive and enslave both soul and body. Sad to relate, millions of unsuspecting people have become their victims.

WE ALL NEED to pay strict attention to our Savior's warning, "Beware of false prophets which came to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravenous wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Are grapes gathered from thorns, or figs from thistles?" To ignore the Lord's danger signal is to court disaster. "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees." The Prarisees who outwardly appeared as innocent sheep, but inwardly were ravenous wolves who devoured widows' houses and for a pretense made long prayers. "Beware of the Sadducees," the political opportunists who render lip service to God and groveled at the feet of Roman politicians. They adopted a servile attitude toward the party in power. Not so, the true prophet of God, John the Baptist. He told Herod to his face that he was an adulterer. Jesus called Herod "That Fox."

"Beware of false prophets" who would make people pawns of the state. They used their office for ulterior motives. They hold the form of religion but deny the power of it. Their proposal for a new social order with peace and prosperity (generally a high sounding name of Russian origin) appears harmless, but the results are fatal. It is the "sheep's clothing" that catches people off their guard. Think how the apparently harmless proposals for "moderation" caught multitudes of good people. Remember "The Eighteenth Amendment is doomed. This does not mean the return of the saloon. It must not return." It has returned with a vengeance, tearing hearts and homes apart like "ravenous wolves."

Today, the "wolves in sheep's clothing" are trying to legalize gambling "to provide revenue for the state, to pay pensions for the aged, the widow and the fatherless." Some recent advocates of legalized gambling have been exposed by the Kefauver Committee as being in league with the underworld. "Are grapes gathered from thorns or figs from thistles?" No! "Thus you will know them by their fruits." The fruits of the "false prophets" smell to high heaven, rotten to the core, the enemy of God and man. Don't be gullible. "Beware."

"... I shall not want"

Today through the light shed upon the twenty-third Psalm by the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, its promise brightens into practical fulfillment.

Supply, health — whatever is legitimately needful—is available to man without fail, and comes through the spiritual understanding of God, divine Love, which Christian Science brings.

Anyone who thoughtfully studies Science and Health and puts its teachings to the test in his daily life will find the "still waters" of the Bible promise.

Science and Health may be bought, borrowed or read at all Christian Science Reading Rooms. The coupon is also for your use.

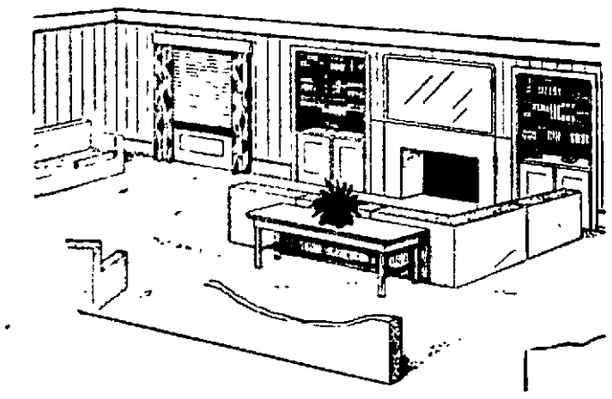
YOUR HOME TODAY and TOMORROW

By Douglas Tuomey

Bad Room Design May Aid Placing Furniture

When a living room has a fireplace off-center and windows that do not balance, they often present a problem in the location of the furniture. If there are two more doors leading into the room further complications are added. Long, narrow rooms, short, wide rooms and elongated rooms are other dimensions that baffle the homeowner and his arrangement chosen. A set of modern furniture was placed as pictured so that it formed an attractive enclosure around the fireplace and filled in the center of the room in excellent shape.



the ingenuity of the professional decorator. Before it may be said a room has been successfully and comfortably furnished if the unique possibilities of it were stunted. As a matter of fact, in capable hands the bad design of the room has frequently been turned to a distinct advantage.

The illustration shown here of a long narrow room with badly placed fireplace, window and cabinets is typical of a room that could not be "brought together" suitably. The stock arrangement of a group in front of the fireplace composed of two chairs and a coffee table cut the room in two distinct halves, with isolated furniture at both ends and emphasizing the bad shape. After considerable juggling of furniture, the solution was found in the arrangement shown. A set of modern furniture was placed as pictured so that it formed an attractive enclosure around the fireplace and filled in the center of the room in excellent shape.

This arrangement also has the advantage of several possible rearrangements. Two of the sections can be swung around to flank the fireplace, the long table can be set across the fireplace and the sections divided to form a circle around it, all of which provides the home-owner with a change from the monotony of the living room atmosphere.

Those who have trouble with furniture placement must never despair of arriving at a good-looking room. In these days of inexpensive fabrics and easy-working enamels and paints, much can be done with old furniture. A smooth overall color scheme is easy to reach, and combined with a study of the room dimensions and shape, a smart living room is within reach of anyone.

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSE

—By ROGER C. WHITMAN—

Filling In A Doorway

Q.: We have two apartments divided by a single door. We want to remove the casing and paster, the opening. What would be the most soundproof material that could be used between the walls of this doorway before we plaster it?

A.: The mere fact that you use a soundproof construction in the area of the doorway, will not make the entire wall area soundproof. My suggestion would be to use the usual two by four studs then lath and plaster the area to the level of the surrounding plaster. For soundproofing, a thicker wall area would be necessary which would make the area out of line with the rest of the wall and nothing will be accomplished.

* * *

Marred Television set

Q.: The finish on the top of my television set has developed a maze of little cracks or scratches, some of them deep. The sides are ok. If I refinish it, will these cracks reappear? If so, what should I do first?

A.: Those cracks are undoubtedly due to the heat from the tubes in the set. Apparently they are not receiving proper ventilation. Some means of providing more air is needed, or the same thing will happen again. If the television service men can't remedy this condition, you may have to drill a few holes in each side of the cabinet near the top. Before taking such a step which will admittedly mar the cabinet's appearance, try moving the set a little farther away from the wall. It will give more cool air a chance to get in.

* * *

Sooty Fireplace Bricks

Q.: How can I clean off the blackness of my fireplace bricks so that they look nice again?

A.: With a stiff brush, scrub off the thickest sections of the soot. Then scrub the remainder with hot water and washing soda, one cupful of the soda per pail. Or if you have any mechanic's hand soap which contains lime said, it will also do the job very well. Rinse thoroughly with clear water. I suggest that you have plenty of newspapers or other protective covering for any floor area which is in the splash zone, and move any good furniture to a safe distance.

* * *

Window Sill Trouble

Q.: My window sills are marble, the windows aluminum casements. The filler between the bottom of the window and the sill has cracked and crumbled, leaving gaps. How can I patch these gaps myself?

A.: Pry out all loose material in the gaps and open spaces, and fill with a light-colored caulking compound, available at paint and hardware stores.

* * *

Removing Whitewash

Q.: How can I remove whitewash from my stone wall?

A.: Wire-brush the thickest parts of the whitewash. Then scrub what's left with brush and hot water, to each pail of which is added one cupful of ammonia.

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

(First of Two Articles on the Heating Plant)

Big expenses always seem to come at the wrong time. Sometimes the home owner gets a forewarning, such as when a new paint job is going to be required—or even a new roof. But the need for a new heating plant invariably is an awful kick in the budget.

So it's worth while to take care of the plant you have. Treat it like the heart of your house and it won't get the palps or a thrombosis.

Since summer is tougher on a heating plant than any winter ever was, this is the season to give the old hot box the once over with a good coat of oil to ward off rust and corrosion. A thorough cleaning is first on the program. Assuming that your basement is average, where the air is cool and damp through the summer, you'll play safe by taking down the smoke pipe, cleaning it and storing it in a dry place until fall. The chemicals in the soot can have a destructive corrosive effect when they become damp. They produce a form of sulphuric acid that eats through the metal.

* * *

IT'S A DIRTY JOB to take the pipe down, but if you maneuver it carefully you won't have to look like the end-man in a hot talent minstrel show. Hold a newspaper over the low end and get the pipe outdoors. Stand it on end on the paper, tap it gently all over to loosen excess soot; then brush it out, scraping if possible.

An oil spray using any light oil, such as drainings from the crankcase, in an insect spray gun —will protect it from rusting. If you don't want to take this trouble get set to replace your smoke pipe every two or three years.

A good place to store a smoke pipe, if you can't get it into your attic conveniently, is to hang it from the ceiling in the garage or basement.

Clean the baffles in a hot-water boiler for the same reason. Use a wire brush and a scraper. And remove all ashes from the firebox and ash pit. They can get soggy from condensation during the summer.

* * *

DON'T FORGET the ash dump of your fireplace flue. This will yield wood ashes that your wife will prize highly for mysterious ministrations in the garden.

After you have the entire heating plant cleaned out, inspect the grates and the walls of the firebox for broken or cracked units. Any such defects should be remedied promptly. Order the parts and have them installed while the time is ripe. Examine the boiler for leaks. Then give all the innards a good coating of lubricating oil.

Oil or grease the edges and hinges of the boiler door and leave it open for ventilation. Unoiled boiler doors left closed, for the summer rust radically around the edges where air is drawn in and condenses.

* * *

IF YOU'RE ONE of the lucky ultra-modern home owners with automatic equipment — an oil burner, automatic stoker, or gas fired furnace—you can rely on the manufacturers instructions. But take them seriously. They are compiled from actual tests and mean exactly what they say. No reputable manufacturer is going to stick his neck out by omitting a fair warning.

In many communities the fuel dealer offers service for a modest fee in connection with his contract. This is especially advantageous if you live in a development or a neighborhood where several homes have similar heating plants. The service man gets to understand them.

Heating and ventilating firms clean furnaces with vacuum systems to prevent the spread of dust and keep peace in the family. However, if you notice an excessive collection of soot in your heating plant, it may mean that you are using the wrong type of fuel or that you have inefficient combustion. Have the dampers adjusted.

* * *

FINALLY, TAKE a look at the chimney. See if the cement is still sound around the smoke pipe joint. Cracks in chimney masonry call for repointing. Double-check the woodwork around the chimney for safe clearance or need of fireproofing.

(Next: Some New Heating Plants)

* * *

A FILLED OIL TANK CUTS WATER TROUBLE

If you have an oil burner you can make a big mistake by not keeping your oil storage tank filled during the summer.

Partial filling allows an air space in which condensation can occur. Although this is not likely to rust your oil-coated tank, it can add an accumulation of water to your oil and cause trouble next heating season.

CLASS NAMES COMMITTEE

Committees were appointed when the Fite Memorial Baptist Willing Workers Class met Tuesday night. Mrs. Leona Sanderson was hostess in her home on Davids street. The hostess was in charge of devotions. Mrs. Lulu Spain presided for business. Appointed on committees were Mrs. Sanderson, devotions; Mrs. Stella Lee and Mrs. Mary Roderick, program, Mrs. Mary Simpkins, Mrs. Jennie Lingrel, and Mrs. Margaret Darling, ways and means; Mrs. Alice Barr, sunshine cards; and Mrs. Hazel Bailey, flowers. Galion Girl Scout Dads Plan Camp Work

Special to The Star

GALION—Fathers of the Girl Scouts and Brownies of Galion are being organized into Dads' Patrols to prepare the Lone Star Girl Scout Camp for opening in July.

At a meeting Thursday in the Scout rooms, M. C. McElroy, camp chairman, outlined plans for work that will be necessary in order to open the camp this season. He set up patrols and assigned them different jobs. It is hoped that a Dads' Patrol can be organized for each of the 18 troops of Girl Scouts and Brownies in Galion, Mrs. Harold Hartman said today. She is president of the Galion Girl Scout association.

The 40-acre camp was purchased about a year and a half ago from Nathan Beck. The grounds are wooded with many ravines and valleys. The Girl Scouts have had a well drilled and fencing completed. The camp is eight miles southeast of Galion. The township road runs east and lies between Route 19 and the West Point road which are north and south roads.

Wise Planning Yields Profits

House Should Be Built To Fit Site

FIT YOUR HOUSE to its site, instead of trying to fit the land to a house.

Any architect will tell you this. And if you follow the advice you will save a lot of money, a lot of headaches, plenty of heartaches and you'll come out with a better home.

Grading is costly and where much of it must be done the results often are disappointing. It means changing the contour of the land, necessitating new drainage courses, and it can be a tricky job to keep water from running into your basement.

Orientation is important. It means you will have, or will not have, morning sunshine in your bedrooms and dining area, a living room with a cheerful southern outlook and still cool in late summer afternoons, a kitchen and laundry away from the hot sun when work must be done.

* * *

THESE FACTORS and others form one of the biggest problems in building a house from stock plans. Unless you own a comparatively flat lot with a frontage facing in the direction for which the plans are drawn, it is well to study the plan you like in relation to your lot.

Here are some things you can do:

▶ Find out what local regulations require in setting a house back from the road.

▶ Determine how far your house must be from each side boundary. If zoning or other restrictions call for 25 feet on each side of your house to insure 50 feet between neighbors, a 75-foot frontage will only allow for a house 25 feet wide. Plans for a so-called ranch house, spreading 65 feet wide, naturally cannot be built on such a lot, unless it can be turned sidewise.

▶ Visit the lot in the morning, at noon and in the late afternoon to see how the shadows fall.

▶ If the lot slopes, look for ruts, gullies or ravines cut by rain water to determine drainage directions. If these run in the direction of a neighbor's property he has a right to ask you to keep water from your property running over his, washing out his lawn, or flooding his cellar.

▶ Notice what trees you will have to cut down and those you will want to save. It takes 30 to 50 years for some trees to grow to a good size and then they may stand for 50 to 100 years more.

▶ Look for rock outcroppings. Rock conditions may determine whether you will build with or without a basement.

▶ Figure on where your driveway will be, how much snow shoveling or drainage it will involve. If you must curve it to spare a big tree, consider the problem of backing out.

* * *

ONE COUPLE found a house of their dreams. The plan was perfect for their needs and preferences. They decided to build it on a hillside plot, heavily wooded and commanding an unobstructed distant view.

The land was on the south side of a road, where the plan would be naturally oriented without changes. It allowed for large window walls on the rear to face south into a woods. A knoll part way up the slope seemed to be an ideal spot for the house. Of course, some grading and clearing of woods would be necessary.

The placing of the house was studied carefully. It seemed to fit the land, all right, and certain large trees in front and at the sides could be spared.

The cost of using a bulldozer in that area was $90 a day. It was estimated that a day or two of bulldozing would do it.

Work started. And reality took the place of dreams. By the time the site was ready, the bulldozer had worked for seven days.

The front of the property was nearly denuded of trees. The bulldozer had to have elbow room and trucks and a concrete mixer had to get in.

* * *

LEVELLING THE House site gouged out the hill to a point where the large picture windows on the rear would face a sand-bank some 20 feet high—instead of the forest primeval the owners had bargained for.

Grading had buried the trunks of the few remaining big trees in front to a depth of three to four feet. This mean tree wells had to be built.

Water in the basement before the house was entirely completed called for more grading. When this was finished heavy rains demonstrated that much of the hillside water would flow nicely down on a neighbor's yard. This meant an elaborate system of drainage tiles.

The driveway turned out to be so steep that a costly hard surface became a must.

The story turned out to have a happy ending, but it took close to $2,000 to achieve it—half of that going into landscaping a property chosen for its natural beauty.

Double-Edged Answer

THE SUBVERSIVES investigation of the Ohio assembly is running into the legal wheeze about refusing to answer questions on constitutional grounds.

A Mrs. Pauline Taylor of Youngstown depended heavily on the wheeze to thwart her questioners last Thursday, even refusing to tell her maiden name because it might incriminate her.

Whether or not this will draw a citation for contempt of the General Assembly is uncertain. But there is no uncertainty about the effect of the self-incrimination dodge on public opinion.

A witness is safely within his constitutional rights in refusing to answer a question asked in an official inquiry only if the answer in fact would tend to incriminate him. Thus, persons questioned in connection with the Communist conspiracy refuse to answer only if they have something to hide. If they have nothing to hide they will not risk a citation for contempt.

To the tellatale signs of the Communist conspiracy at work must be added the over-frequent use of these words: "I claim my constitutional right to refuse to answer the question for the reason that any answer may tend to incriminate me." What once was protection for the innocent has been twisted into a slippery legal device to protect witnesses with something to conceal. Those who rely on it merely advertise their need for it.

Pressure Bloc Government

EIGHTEEN citizens of the United States now have been appointed by the White House to handle wage stabilization in the mobilization program.

Six of them are supposed to represent the public. That is absurd. The public includes everybody. If all 18 members of this board are not interested in what is good for the public, they should never have been appointed.

Under the ridiculous practice of pressure-bloc appeasement six other members of the wage stabilization board are supposed to represent industry. That, too, is absurd. Industry had nothing to do with selecting them; there is no cohesion among the competitive elements of industry—no way to reach a common decision.

The remaining six members are supposed to represent labor. This is the crowning absurdity, because all of them are professional unionists. Union members are only a minority of the working population of the country; i.e., labor.

But let no one doubt that the six unionists will represent unions. They will be the spokesmen on WSB for the united labor policy committee which represents A.F.L., C.I.O., and most of the railroad brotherhoods. It intends to dominate the board through its six representatives. There is nothing in sight to prevent this—absolutely nothing.

The Truman Administration has given the union pressure bloc minority control of wage stabilization and has given it disproportionate representation throughout the mobilization program.

Gen. Ridgway's Confidence

MUCH SYMPATHY has been offered to Gen. Ridgway since he stepped into Gen. MacArthur's shoes. It has been pointed out that Gen. Ridgway was inheriting a military dilemma which his predecessor said he was unable to resolve with the means at his command.

But in his current statements, Gen. Ridgway does not sound like a man bogged down in a dilemma. He sounds, rather, like a military commander pleased with the results of a defensive maneuver which has stopped the Chinese Reds' spring offensive in its tracks.

He has expressed confidence that the forces under his command can stop any new offensive. "It is a tragic thing," he said, speaking of the Communist army's failure to force the U. N. out of Korea, "that they have to sacrifice so many tens of thousands of people and continue to devastate their country for their own aggressive selfish ends."

It may be clearer to Gen. Ridgway than it is to his countrymen debating Far Eastern policy that he did not inherit the only dilemma in Asia. There is another one that never has been solved by Red China, what Peiping—and Moscow—think about war without victory is not being revealed.

Government Is Not a Private Fight

COULD IT BE that some of the employes of the American people bickering and knifing each other in Washington have forgotten who they are? They are not working for a political party, an individual, or an ideological "wing."

They are not paid to get even with one another in government feuds.

They are certainly not paid to do anything funny with any of the records which belong to all the people of the United States.

Yet there is talk of reprisals against jobholders who happen to say something in a public hearing which might miff someone.

There is talk of smearing persons like Gen. MacArthur because their conduct has been annoying to the party in power.

The city that was designated to be the capital of the United States seems to be turning sometimes into the headquarters of a decadent bureaucracy too busy with its own affairs to put the general welfare first.

General Speaks Clearly

By David Lawrence

MacArthur Shows No Concern for Petty Politics

A SENSE of tragedy—not triumph—characterized General MacArthur in his first day of testimony.

His was no concern for petty politics or for the maneuvers of debate in one of the bitterest controversies of our times. His concern was for the blood of American boys being spilled in Korea. It is as if he alone cared. For the Congress, some of whose members have been thinking only of political advantage or disadvantage, is being reminded that somebody is ordering American boys to keep on being struck by the enemy without a chance of using maximum force to fight back.

LAWRENCE

It took a tone of vehemence to hush the audience as General MacArthur brought the realism of the battlefield to the committee room. America is engaged in war, yet allows someone to limit the use of its force. America has accepted a mission to resist aggression—but the military commander has been told really not to carry out his mission. These were the simple truths that the distinguished witness emphasized again and again.

As General MacArthur unfolded his case, it was apparent that many a military man throughout the world would understand the historic and traditional position on which he stood—that when peace overtures have failed and war comes, the business of the soldier is to bring that war to a speedy conclusion. But not now—as someone on the civilian side orders "military appeasement."

* * *

WHAT AMAZED many persons who heard the testimony was the General's explicit language, his challenging phrases, his thorough familiarity with the instructions given him. He declared unequivocally that he had carried out every military command sent to him by his superiors. To this day it cannot be said truthfully that the General was dismissed for "military insubordination" or for disobeying orders. The burden of proof of that charge still rests on President Truman.

What is more important, the General revealed that the Joint Chiefs of Staff, exactly 90 days before his removal, expressed views identical with his concerning the importance of using the Chinese Nationalist troops against the Communists. If the Joint Chiefs changed their minds later, they never told General MacArthur.

The General answered questions with the fluency of an experienced debater, but he showed no desire to seem controversial. He answered in friendly tones all questions, even those directed to him in an apparently critical vein.

It is plain already that this episode opens up fundamental questions — the interference by civilians with military tactics on the battlefield, the lack of respect for the authority of the unified commander in the field when he is confronted by battle conditions, and above all the curious idea that some other nations can decide American policy on the battlefield even though America supplies—and suffers—most of the casualties.

* * *

THE DEMOCRATIC party's effort to make it appear that the whole thing is just a Republican political crusade against the Administration is a sad reflection upon the political judgment of the majority party. For, when any party starts secret hearings, the public gets suspicious. The only justification for secrecy was the argument that military information useful to the enemy might leak out. Yet most of what has been deleted concerns details of the enemy's supposed strength, and such estimates aren't always accurate anyway.

Now the charge is being made that the all-important message of Jan. 12 from the Joint Chiefs of Staff to MacArthur shouldn't have been read by the General without a paraphrase, because it might permit someone in an enemy country to break a code. This is a futile attempt to introduce a smokescreen. For anybody who knows anything about codes knows how easy it is to vary your own code overnight and also how hard it is for the enemy to break a code unless the whole message is made public. It is known that the extract from the Jan. 12 message was part of a lengthy report or study by the Joint Chiefs.

* * *

GENERAL MacARTHUR has posed the real issue—how long are comfortable bureaucrats here and in other capitals of the world going to keep on talking about a war of "attrition" while American boys are being killed or wounded to the point that our casualties now number 63,000? How long is this going to go on without an attempt to bring victory? That's the issue to which the Democrats must give answer now or find themselves overwhelmed at the polls as the voters in due time give the only answer they can. But between now and January 1953, can policies be changed and lives saved? That's the biggest worry today for the American people.

A Never-Never World

By Raymond Moley

MR. JOHN HERSEY is a very capable reporter. He proved that in his remarkable story of the effects of the bomb upon the people of Hiroshima. His literary capacity was demonstrated in his "A Bell for Adano." He has now produced a detached account of the daily activities, the interests, the casual comments and personal philosophy of Harry S. Truman, current incumbent of the Presidential office. This account is running serially in "The New Yorker" magazine.

MOLEY

Hersey is true to his faith as a reporter. There are none of his personal views. He conforms to Othello's directive, "Nothing extenuate nor set down aught in malice." He permits the President to reveal himself.

To this reader of Hersey's account, the most illuminating part describes a typical Truman day, from dawn to sleep. Since I had a similar opportunity to observe the detailed activities of President Truman's predecessor, I would conclude that the Hersey account represents fairly standard Presidential routine. And his story reinforces a conclusion which I reached long ago, that a President, despite ample facilities, lives in an atmosphere of unreality—a never-never world.

* * *

THE DAY BEGAN when the President, before breakfast, read a long report from his economic advisers—gentlemen, incidentally, who know exactly what they want the President to know. Then he had a conference with his secretaries and other members of his staff. They had messages and papers to give him, interspersed with wisecracks. Then he met a congressman who wanted something for his state. Then there were two "hollow-eyed lame-duck congressmen" who wanted jobs. Then the ambassador to Cuba came to tell the President that the president of Cuba was strongly in favor of the Truman foreign policy. Then a group from New York to give the President an award, and pictures were taken. Then came the chairman of the National Resources Board, who told the President something about minerals. Then there was lunch, and then a nap.

Then there was paper-signing for a while. Then a meeting with the Security Council, which was secret. Then a senator who wanted some appointments, some regional defense offices for his state. Then came Democratic Chairman Boyle, with a batch of recommendations for jobs. Then a glance at the budget message, and more documents to be signed. Then the President went back to Blair House and over "two Old Fashioneds each" and supper, he talked over the budget with Secretary Snyder. Finally to bed and to sleep over the budget.

* * *

SINCE THIS is a typical Presidential day, it may be asked when in all these contacts the President gets straight information about what the sentiment of the country really is and what is really going on in the vast domain over which he presides. Everybody either wants something or is dependent upon amiability and acquiescence to keep his job. Nobody in this long succession is going to tell the whole, unvarnished truth.

Even the four newspapers that Hersey says the President scans are favorable to his policies.

Is it small wonder, after day after day, month after month, and year after year, that the President thinks he is doing well, because "everybody" says so? And that finally he believes that what is right is what he says, and what he says is what is right?

That is why it is a blessing to limit his term of office. And to bring to this office a fresh mind—a mind which will, in turn, be the victim of the same process of mental auto-inoculation.

Congress Quiz

Q—Is the administration's plan to disperse and decentralize government agencies dead for this session of Congress?

A—A Republican - southern Democrat coalition in the Senate April 23 "shelved" the plan by sending it back to the public works committee. Rarely does a committee return a bill to the floor under such circumstances. However, Senator Henry C. Dworshakk (R) of Idaho has introduced the decentralization plan as a separate bill.

Perimeter of Freedom Grows Smaller

By Carl R. Keiser

Republished from The Quill

THE NOTION OF a free press, established long ago in this country by the Bill of Rights, has for generations been taken for granted in many lands. In recent years and months this noble concept has received blow after blow, real and attempted. Liberty has been forced to retreat before totalitarianism abroad. Here it has been threatened by demagogery and plain political stupidity.

As this is written, the shrinking perimeter of freedom of opinion is most dramatically seen in Argentina. There Juan Peron has for all practical purposes struck the final and fatal blows at La Prensa. It was first denied publication by boycott of the "proletarian" unions who have made Peron their darling. Then the government moved to seize it. Its distinguished editor was ordered arrested and was declared "a fugitive from justice."

La Prensa, as every newspaperman knows, is not only the leading Spanish language newspaper in this hemisphere. It is one of the world's great newspapers by any standard of measurement. Highest among such standards is a newspaper's service as a critic of government and a defender of minority opinion. La Prensa's loyalty to this important measuring stick is precisely why it got in deep trouble. It stood up to tyranny.

The American reader may shrug off La Prensa's fate. Argentina is far away and no visible threat to a nation which has big and urgent problems of security against world communism. What if Peron is suppressing freedom of the press? Mussolini and Hitler did it. Stalin and all the little Stalins are still doing it.

Some nations, including members of the United Nations, never had freedom of the press at all. This view is sophistry. Freedom is a whole, and we either speak for it everywhere or fight a cold war in vain.

* * *

IT CAN BE argued that what has happened to La Prensa cannot happen here. I'll concede that it is next to inconceivable that it will happen here, under any government loyal to the present Constitution. But what might not be taken away by official violence might be lost bit by bit. And legally. Recent samples of proposed state legislation indicate this all too plainly.

The most dangerous example occurred in Georgia, a state which paradoxically has its share of good newspapers and more than its share of our more demagogic politicians.

Georgia legislators, rallying to Governor Herman Talmadge's dislike of "them lying newspapers," wrote three bills designed to curb the press. One, plainly in violation of the federal Constitution, would have subjected the press to "state regulation." The others imposed a tricky libel definition and forbade newspaper "monopolies." A target of the latter would be Atlanta's newspapers which have been foes of the Talmadge clan.

The roar of protest, even from pro - Talmadge newspapers, abashed the legislature sufficiently to block the measures for the moment. A subservient Senate actually passed the anti-monopoly and libel bills. The House defeated the regulation measure. But the threat is still in the air.

One of Talmadge's lieutenants was quoted as saying: "I wouldn't pass those bills, I'd hold 'em over the heads of newspapers."

* * *

OHIO RECENTLY produced some pretty silly anti-newspaper bills. One legislator, apparently smarting after the 1950 campaign, proposed to require newspapers to sign all articles on political candidates, including editorials, with the writer's name. This not only would deny newspapers opinion as institutions but showed a naive ignorance of how and why editorials, especially, are arrived at and written.

Such moves, however dim their chance with the Supreme Court, deserved the tongue-lashing they got. I could only wish that along with the tongue-lashing more of the press had been smart enough to ridicule such political clowns.

The Americans and the British, significantly the two leading proponents of freedom of speech, have more than once laughed silly politicians and their ideas out of existence. Commenting on the Ohio bill to require signed editorials, the Chicago Daily News suggested that newspapers borrow from the Hollywood super-feature and envolve an editorial credit line in this order:

"Idea by Smith; doctrine evolved in consultation with Jones, Roe, Doe and Poe; first draft by Smith; interlineations by Jones; revisions by Poe; corrections by Moe; typographical errors by Joe; presswork by Hoe; Smith's suit by Hart Schaffner & Marx."

Daily Bible Thought

No one can avoid useful service without blighting the very soul and starting a moral decay that will finally destroy the individual and finally his family as well; "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work.—Deut. 5:13.

Marion County History Brevities

An old Indian trail ran from Upper Sandusky, by Caledonia, thence by way of Mt. Gilead, Fredericktown and Mount Vernon, down Old Creek to White Woman River. This was the old war trace, and much traveled. The next trace ran from Upper Sandusky, to John Ballantine's old place, or about a mile west of Marion, to the head branches of the Scioto. A man by the name of Wright, a jeweler and blacksmith, lived on the trace, in what is now Green Camp. The Delawares had traces running toward the fire lands on the reserve, which they traveled a good deal.

CROSSTOWN By Roland Coe

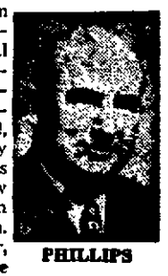
"He wants t'know about a RAIN CHECK."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

What a Week!

The Kefauver Crime Committee report, sensational and sweeping as it is, gets an Oscar for bad timing. It was issued simultaneously with the Wedemeyer report, the opening of the MacArthur hearings in Congress, the end of the Giants' slump and the outbreak of the Rita Hayworth-Prince Aly Khan war. Whether the recommendations of the committee will bring all-out action will depend on whether the committee, with a new pitcher, Herbert O'Conor, on the mound, makes the most of its newly voted summer run or just does light road work and shadow boxing from here on, with fleeting touches of television.



PHILLIPS

With the summer weather, crucial baseball series and the picnic season at hand, there is a strong probability that all the Senate did was to vote the crime problem a wonderful time in which to die. Come on, Estes! How about singing "Old PROBERS Never Die!" Quite a few blows against the underworld will be struck in various cities as a result of the shocking Kefauver report. The Congress will pass some of the proposed legislation. But there will be no epochal follow-through unless the committee uses its four months of added life with the "Three V" (vigor, vim and video) routine it was employing when the previous contract expired a month ago. Committee members have said that during the May to September life extension, there will be little time for the television technique which dramatized the crime picture, pumped it into millions of homes and alerted the nation. They had better change their mind on that if they want to sustain the public hopes and throw everything in the book at the mobsters.

* * *

Can you fancy the underworld getting the law-abiding world on the run and then deciding to pull its punches, cut out a vital element in its showmanship and make the performance duller? Can you imagine a Gangster Committee being that close to victory and then, when given four months more time, deciding to drop the very routines which got the greatest results?

* * *

No matter how sensational a crime report may be, it is still a report, a thing of paper and ink. And the first week in May is extra hard on any report over two pages long. Millions of Americans are too busy with spring gardens to read anything that doesn't begin with "Till the soil thoroughly, drill holes six inches apart and sprinkle seeds; etc., etc." Millions more are engrossed in batting averages and the MacArthur testimony. And think of all the people who are digging worms to go fishing!

* * *

The Kefauver Committee originally intended to make its report around the end of March, which would have been the height of the open season on filing reports. Instead it allowed public interest to grow cold. And this week it announced its findings at a time of so many sensations that the public is all mixed up. The well-known Garble Sisters were discussing it today. "I think General McKefauver's charges are terrific and that all racketeers in and out of office should be indicted no matter what the General Staff thinks of interstate crime," said one. "The MacArthur report is scandalous," said her sister. "We should attack Costello's bases in Manchuria, Saratoga, New Orleans or anywhere else." It just goes to show.

The Kefauver Committee threw not only the book at Bill O'Dwyer, but both book-ends.

The underworld is getting great comfort from the fact the Kefauver Committee report is too long for most people to read. The latest racket is offering to read it for a slight charge.

How To Turn Weakness Into Strength

By Norman Vincent Peale

ON A TRAIN one night, a group of us were talking in the club car about hobbies. One man spoke up and said he had an unusual hobby. We asked him what it was and he said a curious thing: "I go around gathering strength from people."

"I suppose our faces all showed our surprise, so he reached into his pocket and pulled out a handful of loose change and held it out to us. And there, amidst the silver coins, was a little aluminum cross. Then he told us that he was one of a group of men who carried such crosses, not on their watch chains, but in their pockets with their change. "After all," he explained, "that's the best place to carry a religious reminder because when you bring your money out and find a cross there, you're going to be careful for what you spend it."

Dr. Peale

He went on to say that it was the practice of his group to carry around such a cross until it had taken on some of the strength of the personality of the man who carried it and then to pass it on to someone else whom it might help. I asked him if he would give his cross to me and he did.

* * *

I'VE CARRIED THAT cross in my pocket for more than a month now. And every time I pull it out of my pocket I think of its meaning as a symbol of the victory we can gain over our weaknesses. It's nothing but a piece of metal yet it symbolizes a powerful deposit of strength when I realize that it has been passed on to me from a series of men, each recognizing his weaknesses and overcoming those weaknesses to gain spiritual strength.

Dr. John R. Mott once made the statement that, "You can be strongest at your weakest place." If you have a weakness and you recognize it and go to work on it, bringing all of your own resources to bear upon that weakness and applying to it the power of faith in God, the very mustering of so unprecedented an attack on the weakness serves to convert it into your strongest point.

The American Indians believed that when a brave scalped an enemy that the strength of that defeated enemy passed into the victor. That's why a warrier liked to go around with many scalps on his belt. It showed how strong he was.

* * *

WHENEVER YOU SCALP a weakness, the strength that weakness had over you is transferred to you and you become just that much stronger.

In the process of welding, two pieces of metal are brought together by the application of intense heat at the point at which the weld is to be made. I am told that the application of this heat makes the point at which the weld is applied even stronger than the parent metal or metals.

How can you go about this process of becoming strongest in your weakest place? First, make a list today of your own weaknesses. Recognizing your weaknesses is your first step forward.

Then concentrate your mind on one of the great truths we can learn from the Bible, that no matter what your weakness is, by the continual application of God's power to it, you can not only free yourself from it but even become stronger in that respect than you have ever been before. The Bible speaks of those people who acquired that precious ingredient called faith and "who through faith out of weakness were made strong."

THAT'S ALL THERE is to the formula. It's that simple. It's a plan anybody can use. So start today by honestly listing your weaknesses. Then day by day fill your mind to overflowing with faith in God. Do this by saturating your mind with the Bible or by going to your church.

Once your mind overflows with faith in what God can accomplish within you, eventually where there was weakness, strength will develop. I do not expect any kind of weakness for there is no weakness great enough to overcome the power of faith. If you completely surrender yourself and yield yourself and keep filling your mind with God, you will gradually find strength welling up within you. Out of weakness, you will be made strong.

Students Blame Wilberforce Bill Veto on "Politics"

WILBERFORCE, O., May 5—(AP)—Gov. Frank J. Lausche today stood accused of "playing politics" in vetoing a bill to complete divorcement of the state-supported college here and the church-supported Wilberforce University.

The accusation was made in a letter sent to the governor by the student council of the college of education and industrial arts at Wilberforce. The council said it was "at a loss" to understand the governor's action.

Lausche vetoed Senate bill No. 58 Thursday on the grounds the bill, if allowed to become law, would leave the state open to a charge it was operating a segregated school.

The two colleges at Wilberforce have been operated as separate institutions since a split over administration developed in 1947. Wilberforce University is sponsored by the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bill Lausche vetoed would have changed the name of the state-supported school from the college of education and industrial arts at Wilberforce, to Central State College. It also would have cancelled the right of the church school's trustees to name one of the state school's nine trustees. The church board has not exercised this right for several years.

In its letter, the student council accused Lausche of having a lack of interest in the state school's welfare.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WHAT torture, deep in the underground Soviet political prison cell, warped Robert Vogeler into a man who sobs and shakes convulsively — who cannot talk, even to his children, for five minutes at a stretch without weeping?

For security reasons, the State Department has urged the ex-Soviet MVD prisoner not to talk until the government sees him through a hospital rest cure. But, from a man who suffered the same searing of mind and body in a Communist dungeon, comes the details of the torture techniques used to smash the will of once free men.

Victor Riesel

This report on wrecking a mind comes from forces working underground in Europe with the A.F.L.'s anti-Communist headquarters on the continent. Documentary evidence that this is the truth is in the hands of the A.F.L.'s national leaders and now carelessly buried in United Nations' archives.

We have it from this man who served in Soviet prisons that each type of torture has its special name—"the candle" . . . "the swallow" . . . "the high seat" . . . "the humming top" . . . "the mock execution."

* * *

BUT BEFORE THESE tortures comes a period of sweating out the horror of unexplained arrest, the almost suffocating, toilet-stenched cell, stuffed with 150 or more humans. There are the eerie nights which prisoners spend in distorted postures, with one man's feet on another's face. Then, after six or eight weeks—the questioning. But take it in the A.F.L. contact's own words:

"I was generally summoned at night. I had to stand at attention before my investigator until dawn. When this proved of no avail, I was transferred from prison to a basement MVD cell. When I insisted my innocence, they began beating me. I fell down and they proceeded to kick me — 'confess and we'll stop' . . .

"I could not walk back to my cell without help. Later, came various forms of torture. Each has a special technical name."

* * *

HERE, THEN, IS WHAT was suffered by this man whose name, for his family's sake, the A.F.L.'s International Committee must keep secret:

There is "The Swallow": During this treatment, the prisoner must stand on one foot, stretching the other leg far behind. The body is bent forward with hands held upwards. Any movement brings a crack from a rubber truncheon.

There is "The Candle": The prisoner stands immobile for hours at a time.

There is "The Humming Top": The prisoner is suspended from the ceiling with a special belt and whirled around rapidly for several minutes. Then he's let down. His eyes pop. He's dizzy. He can't stand on his feet. The room swirls and voices shoot questions at him, seemingly from out of another whirling world.

There is "The High Seat": The prisoner is put on a tall, narrow stool about six feet high. There is no support for either arms or legs. He must stay there despite repeated sluggings and beltings by revolver butts.

There is "The Mock Execution": The prisoner, after some of these tortures, is led out to a darkened corridor amid talk that since it's all no use, he might as well be killed.

* * *

SUDDENLY, HE'S thrown into solitary confinement. Life crawls on in darkness for months, perhaps years. Somewhere, the mind begins living in a shadowland world, waiting for suggestions since its body has been conditioned by beatings and wrackings after each failure to obey. Finally is obeys. The prisoner confesses.

Inexplicably, this prisoner was released. He made his way eventually to the A.F.L.'s roving representatives in Europe. And he told them:

"I came out an invalid without teeth and with my eyesight permanently impaired. Before my release I had to sign a pledge that I would tell no one of my experiences with the MVD. Not even my wife."

And that's what brings darkness at noon to strong men's minds. Sometimes the torture is more refined. Sometimes the body dies first. But always in the name of the "people's revolutions."

Chinese Puzzle

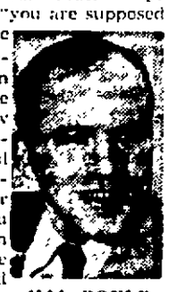
By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—THE Chinese puzzle for today is why nobody in high circles thought the Chinese Reds would enter the Korean war.

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur and the administration are still playing "you-catch-the-hot-potato" on that question.

Each blames the other. The arguments can be summarized like this:

"Listen, General Mac," says Harry Truman, "you are supposed to know more about the Oriental mind than anybody since Confucius. How come those Chinese slipped across the Manchurian border and clipped you before you even knew they were there? You told me at Wake Island they wouldn't come in."



HAL BOYLE

"Don't try to pass the buck to me on that one, Harry," says MacArthur. "Of course, I did say they probably wouldn't come in. But you got a world-wide spy system—the Central Intelligence Agency. How come it didn't warn me the Chinese would fight us?"

* * *

"HOW COME YOU wouldn't even let our Central Intelligence Agency even operate in Tokyo until last January?" replies Harry—or one of his boys.

"Tommyrot," says MacArthur. And back and forth the arguments go until the ordinary man gets completely confused. All he knows is that the Chinese Reds ARE in Korea.

The whole debate must hand a great laugh to the Chinese premier, Chou En-lai. He is the man who publicly told the world in advance what to expect. To paraphrase him, Chou said last fall:

"Now, boys, you got the North Koreans on the run. But if you United Nations fellows go across the 38th Parallel—well, we Chinese aren't going to stand idly by."

The top U. S. brass, including both MacArthur and the Central Intelligence Agency, knew the Chinese were massing troops along the Manchurian border. But they thought it was all a big bluff.

* * *

A BELOW-THE-TOP-BRASS intelligence officer I knew in Korea at the time didn't think the Chinese were kidding at all.

"I don't think we should cross the 38th Parallel," he said, "because I think it will mean we'll have to fight the Chinese. I believe Chou means exactly what he says.

"These Chinese don't want any big foreign land army marching right up to their border, and I don't think they'll let us—if they can stop us. But if we don't cross the parallel they won't have much of an excuse to come into the war."

Pointing out that great powers are historically touchy about having the armies of other great powers get too close to their frontiers, he said:

"Remember what Stalin did in the last war when Hitler attacked Poland? He went into Poland, too, to keep the Germans from getting too close to Russian soil."

* * *

AND THIS OFFICER made some wry remarks about the public's idea of what Army intelligence work consists of.

"They believe you get your information mostly through spies," he said. "That is nonsense. The cloak and dagger stuff is only about 10 percent of intelligence. The other 90 percent is piecing together all the scraps of knowledge you get without espionage — and making them into the right picture."

He complained that when something went wrong most people wanted to blame it on "faulty intelligence."

"Usually it isn't the intelligence that was faulty," he said. "The information is there—but the interpretation is faulty. And you can't blame intelligence for that."

The entry of the Chinese Reds into Korea, he said, illustrated his point. Their army was ready, their premier openly warned it would be used under certain conditions—and it was.

And he thought the American failure to believe the Chinese premier's threat was less of a reflection on our intelligence system than upon the traditional American military habit of low-rating the enemy.

Fool-Proof Way To Prevent Cold Yet To Be Found

There is no doubt about the fact of the common cold. But just what it is depends a lot on who is describing it. For one person, a cold means a mere nasal stuffiness, while another includes in his definition sore throat and inflammation of the windpipe and voice-box.

In general, the common symptoms of colds include such things as a feeling of sickness, headache, soreness or tenderness of the throat and a discharge from the nose which is watery at first but shortly becomes thicker. The symptoms may last for a few days or may continue for more than a week.

For hundreds of years it has been thought by many that such things as draughts, sudden changes in the temperature, wet feet, overeating, and emotional upsets may all bring on a common cold. However, in most cases, a cold is probably picked up from another person.

Experiments have shown that colds can be caused by a virus that may be passed from one person to another.

Unfortunately, up to the present time no real preventive for colds seems to have been found. There are many vaccines made up of killed bacteria that have been used in attempting to prevent colds, but the results from their use have not been very good. The so-called antihistamine drugs have been widely used in recent times in an attempt to prevent colds, but the evidence that they have any such functions is as yet limited, nor it is advisable.

Do not take antihistamine drugs every day in the hope of preventing colds, unless the doctor so advises.

Insofar as the treatment of a cold is concerned, rest in bed, the giving of plenty of fluids, and such drugs as the salicylates tend to make a patient more comfortable. The antibiotic drugs, such as penicillin, are useful in preventing complications of colds, such as infections by germs producing pneumonia or middle-ear infection, but they do little to rout the cold itself.

The more we study this nuisance-making illness, the more we are convinced that its causes are complex and that the same set of symptoms may be produced by a whole host of factors rather than by a single causative agent. Much further study is needed before we can hope to find any single, effective remedy.

2 Burn To Death In Truck-Auto Crash

The dead were identified as Paul Ullrich, 25, Wyoming, O., and John W. McCarty, 25, Covington, Ky.

The accident occurred when a steel-laden tractor-trailer collided with a passenger car on Springfield Pike, Woodlawn.
